ALL CRAZY.

A Mother and Her Son Suddenly Stricken with Frenzy.

The Supposed Appearance of a Dead Father and Husband the Cause—A Neighbor Comes to Their Assistance and is Similarly Afflicted—The Mother Fatally Injured.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—A special dispatch to the Times from Snydertown, Pa., says: "Last night Mrs. Moore, a widow who lives with her young son at Brush valley, near here, was startled by hearing a shriek, followed by agonizing yells in the room next to her own, which was occupied by her son, a youth about sixteen years old. In a fright she ran into the room, and found the boy almost dead with fear, and trembling in every limb. She quieted his fears and questioned him, and after considerable delay he told her that at about midnight, while listening to the furiously raging storm, he was through the dim light of a lamp which burned in the room a man raising the window. Almost paralyzed with fear he sat up in bed, unable to move, until by the aid of a vivid flash of lightning he perceived the features of the man to be similar to those of his father, who was killed in the mines five years ago. With the shriek that had so startled his mother he sank on the bed and the intruder fled hastily. When the mother heard the story she turned her gaze toward the window and beheld the identical face pressed against the pane. With a loud yell she sprang to the window, and, raising the sash, jumped through, and, striking the ground twenty-five feet below with terrible force,

INJURED HERSELF FATALLY.

The shrieks and moans of the young Moore brought a few neighbors to the spot, and they carried the limp body of the woman into the house, and, after a few hours' labor, succeeded in bringing her to sensibility. As soon as she fixed her eyes on her son she burst into a violent fit of laughter, in which the son joined, and which lasted until both fell to the floor exhausted. On the part of young Moore the fit of laughing was followed by violent spasmodic attacks. He foamed at the mouth, barked like a dog, and made vicious snaps at those who attempted to quiet him. A young farmer named Herrick went up to him, and, while attempting to quiet him, caught hold of his hand. No sooner had he done so than he, too, was seized with fearful spasms and in intense agony, exhibiting the peculiar symptoms manifested by the other. The few other neighbors who had come to the scene were so badly frightened as to be of little assistance, and they fled precipitately, leaving the three maniacs alone in the room. Mrs. Moore was stark raving mad and the two young men were busy at work demolishing the furniture and striking one another. One of the women who had at first rushed to the house, ran home and returned with her father, an old army sergeant named Billheimer, who ran into the room and grasping Herrick threw him to the floor, and, putting bound him with the bed ropes. He then secured young Moore in a like manner. Mrs. Moore was bleeding from the wounds received from falling out of the window, and lay on the floor insensible. Lifting her in his arms Billheimer carried the woman to the open air, the storm having ceased. One of the neighbors had mounted a horse about one hour before and ridden at full speed across the rough country road in seaach of a doctor. After a long search he found one and brought him to the stricken family. The young man Herrick was taken home by his father in the morning and another physician attended him. No hope is entertained of Mrs. Moore's recovery. Her son was unusually violent this morning and could scarcely be HELD BY FOUR MEN.

The case has occasioned much excitement among the farmers throughout the neighborhood. Mrs. Moore and her son are practical, steady people. Young Herrick is not so violent, but arrangements are being made for his removal to an asylum. Mrs. Moore was in a sinking condition this evening, and she will hardly live until morning.

GALLATIN, MO., June 20.—Great interest was felt in the Frank James case which came up for trial yesterday. Among the important witnesses present were Mrs. Samuels, the prisoner's mother; Mrs. Sarah Hite, who sued the Louisville Courier-Journal for libel some time ago; W. L. Earthman, of Nashville, Tenn., who gave James employment; J. R. Maffit and F. Hoble, also of Tennessee, and Dick Liddell, which gentlemen are witnesses for the prosecution. The counsel for the prosecution are W. B. Hamilton, prosecuting attorney of Daviess county, and W. H. Wallace, prosecuting attorney of Johnson county; for the defense, John J. Garner of Richmond county, J. H. Daver of Independence, John M. Glover and Charles P. Johnson of St. Louis, and W. H. Rich of Gallatin. Judge Goodlan occupied the bench. A continuance was agreed upon on account of the absence of witnesses for the defense, and the third Monday in August agreed on the date of trial.

Balloon and aeronaut came down with a rush and both plunged into Bonne Femme creek and at once disappeared. The man's body was recovered at 10 p. m.

A BOOM AT BUTLER.

DEVOY IN STRIPES.

He is Assigned a Bench in the Penitentiary Shoe-shop.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 20.—John Devoy, editor of the Irish Nation, who was found guilty of criminal libel against August Belmont, was sentenced yesterday in the general sessions by Judge Cowing to sixty days in the penitentiary. Devoy turned white and clutched nervously at the chair when the sentence was pronounced. He was at once taken to the tombs. Half an hour later he was removed to the penitentiary on Blackwell's island. Upon his arrival there Warden Fox took him to the reception-room, where he was given a bath and a change of clothing. Later in the day a World reporter visited Devoy in his new quarters. When the reporter was ushered into the warden's office Mr. Devoy stepped forward and greeted him with outstretched hands. He did not smile. His face wore a dejected expression, and he was dressed in the common prison suit, the characteristic blue and white trousers and waistcoat.

"You see I have my new clothes on," he said; "they are not becoming, but for this kind of weather. I can't say that I like my quarters, but I suppose on a day like this they are more comfortable than the heated city. I don't complain of my position, but I think that I was convicted under misrepresentations. Col. Fellows in his speech to the jury made a remark that I do not think was fair. He said no matter what the verdict was I would sleep in my own bed that night. That implied that sentence would be suspended, that I would get off free. It had considerable weight with the jury. The judge's charge I don't think was fair. I believe that he had already formed an opinion as to whether I was guilty or not before the case was tried. I think it was a strange accident," he continued with a tinge of sarcasm in his tone, "that out of about twenty thousand Irishmen who reside in the city of New York, there was only one on the jury, while three Englishmen formed a part of my judges. I am an Irish Nationalist, and am consequently at war, as it were, with England, and, therefore, I do not think it was proper to try me before an English jury. I did not desire an Irish jury, but wanted an American jury. But I do not think there was an American on the jury. The other men who sat in the box were either Germans or Italians. What could they understand about the law? They were speech and the charge of the court."

Mr. Devoy then conducted the reporter to his cell. It is No. 17, on the lower floor. As the reporter was inspecting it Warden Fox appeared and said that he had changed the prisoner's cell to No. 8 on the top gallery in the south wing of the penitentiary. The cell is a narrow, whitewashed apartment, containing a small cot, which, excepting a space of a foot and a half, takes the entire room.

"I don't care where you put me; it is all the same to me," said Devoy, sadly. "I have already spent five years in an English prison."

To-day he was assigned a bench in the shoe-shop.

HARVARD WINS,

Beating Columbia Easily in the College Boat Race—Time and Incidents.

NEW LONDON, CONN., June 20.—The four-mile straight-away eight-oared race between Harvard and Columbia colleges was rowed this morning, Harvard winning by twelve lengths. The wind freshened considerably before the start making a bad, chappy sea. Harvard had the west and Columbia the east course. Harvard, though splashing a trifle, got the best of the start and at no time was she headed. At the first half-mile Harvard was pulling thirty strokes and had a lead of half a length. At the mile, which was reached in just six minutes, Harvard had a clear length. Both crews pulled in fine form. Harvard gradually increased the lead and dropped to thirty-three strokes, which she maintained to the finish. At this time Columbia was pulling twenty-nine strokes. The mile and a half was past by Harvard in ten minutes. At the two mile flag her time was 13.05 with a lead of three lengths. Columbia at this point was twenty seconds behind. The race was virtually over here. Harvard gradually increased her lead, Columbia showing visible signs

OF BEING USED UP.

At the two and a half mile flag, Harvard led by four lengths, pulling thirty-four strokes to Columbia's thirty-two. At the three mile flag Harvard had a lead of five lengths which was increased at the three and a half mile to seven lengths. Here Harvard made a fine spurt and crossed the line pulling thirty-four strokes, winning the race by twelve lengths, in 24 minutes and 45 seconds. Columbia's time was 25 minutes and 55 seconds. Harvard pulled in splendid form from the start to the finish, and her new stroke acquitted himself finely.

In the Columbia boat the stroke and number seven on the third mile began to show signs of weakness, and were winded. The attendance outside of collegians was noticeably small. Before the race bets ranged from $100 to $60 to even money on Columbia. The referee was Frank G. Brown, of the Nashua Boat Club, New York.

Meeting of Creditors.

PITTSBURG, PA., June 20.—In regard to the proposed meeting of the creditors of Graff, Bennett & Co., iron manufacturers, this afternoon, John Graff, one of the firm, said that no statement would be made. It would merely be a meeting to discuss the best plan to pursue. Their assets are ample to cover all liabilities.

MATED ONCE MORE.

Rush Tevis and His Divorced Wife Remarried in Philadelphia.

Curious Sequel to the Iglehart Shooting—The Lady's Relatives Bring About the Reconciliation—Mrs. Tevis Living Quietly with Her Friends.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

LANCASTER, OHIO, June 20.—It was announced here last evening by the rewedded bride's relatives that Rush H. Tevis, of St. Louis, and Kate E. Reese, daughter of Col. H. B. Reese of this city, and niece of Senator Sherman, had been married in Philadelphia on the 16th inst. The particulars of their highly sensational estrangement last winter, the shooting of Frank Iglehart, and the subsequent divorce were well known here, hence the news created an immense amount of gossip. Since the affair Mrs. Tevis has lived quietly and in a model manner with friends at Philadelphia. Tevis for her, and made overtures for a reconciliation, to which she was not loth to yield, having seemingly forgotten her late lover. The influential relatives of the wife used every effort to bring about the remarriage, which was strictly private and kept from the press. Mrs. Tevis had mourned much for her little girl, who has been in the father's charge.

COULD NOT OVERCOME HIS LOVE

THE SHOOTING.

The shooting which precipitated the scandal in the case took place on the 28th of November last. Late in the afternoon, a well dressed lady tripped down the steps of the "Tank House," a notorious place kept by Madame Durant, at 1416 Singleton street. The lady was accompanied by a young man. Just after the two had left the house, they were accosted by two grim-looking men, one of whom was the husband of the lady. The latter fired, the ball striking the woman's escort on the left arm. He fell to the sidewalk, and the husband leveled the pistol to fire again, when he was dragged away by his companion, who was a private detective. The wounded man was placed in a hack and taken to a house on Washington avenue, from which place he was moved to St. Luke's hospital, where he remained until two months ago, recovering from his wound.

The man who did the shooting was Rush H. Tevis, and the woman was his wife. The man who was shot was Mr. Frank Iglehart, a gentleman well known in St. Louis. The detective was Abe Grimes. A divorce was secured some months afterwards. Mrs. Tevis is a daughter of Col. Reese, now of the regular army, a niece of Gen. William T. Sherman and also of the late Judge Samuel F. Reber. She is quite young, a handsome blonde, with a splendid figure and engaging manners.

READY TO ROW.

The Oarsmen All Gathered at Pullman—Great Sport Promised.

CHICAGO, June 20.—Sixteen of the noted oarsmen of the country have already arrived to take part in the regatta at Pullman on Friday and Saturday of this week, and they comprise one of the finest fields of rowers ever assembled in this country for a contest. Hanlan, the world's champion, will contend in both the single and double scull races, his companion in the double-scull race being Lee. Hanlan is in fine condition, but it is asserted that he will have to row to hold first place, as some of the fifteen are known to be in most excellent shape and are liable to press him closely. Owing to the large number of contestants three preliminary heats in the single scull contest will be rowed on Friday forenoon, commencing at ten o'clock, and in case eighteen report, six men will appear at each heat. The first and second man in each of these preliminary contests, or six in all, will decide the question of supremacy at 4:30 p. m. on the same day.

On Saturday at 4:30 will occur what is known as the "consolation," open to all contestants of Friday who failed to reach first, second and third place. Then follows the double scull for which there are five entries, as follows: Geo. Hosmer and John McKay, Hanlan and Lee, Weisgerber and Briceland, Plaisted and Parker, J. G. Gaudair and J. W. Kennedy. The oarsmen describe the Lake Calumet course as one of the finest, and with good weather there is a promise of an enormous attendance, as it is really the first great professional race which has ever occurred in the west. The railway companies are preparing to accommodate the large crowds of people attending from the city.

THE ENTRIES.

The full entries for the single scull race up to date are: Edward Hanlan, Toronto, Canada; Wallace Ross, St. John, N. B.; George Hosmer, Boston, Mass.; George W. Lee, Newark, N. J.; Charles E. Courtney, Union Springs, N. Y.; James Dempsey, Geneva, N. Y.; Frank Hill, Boston, Mass.; R. J. Nagle, Boston, Mass.; M. Kilo, Cincinnati, O.; F. A. Plaisted, Chicago, Ill.; Wm. Elliott, ex-champion of England; C. W. Weisgerber, Wm. Briceland and Ed. Claytor, Wheeling, W. Va.; J. A. Ten Eyck, Peekskill, N. Y.; John McKay, Halifax, N. S.; J. G. Gaudair, Creve Cœur, Mo.; J. H. Riley, Saratoga; John Seemen, McKeesport; Harry Parker, Henry Sheldon, Saratoga; T. W. Kennedy, Albert Haman, Halifax.

The prizes for the single are: First prize, $1,000; second, $200; third, $100. In the consolation race the prizes are $200 and $100. The entries up to date in the double-scull race are George Hosmer and John McKay, Hanlan and Lee, Weisgerber and Feising, Plaisted and Mate, and Gaudair and Kennedy. The winner is to get $300.

A REMARKABLE DAY.

Fully $21,000,000 Worth of Wheat Changes Hands in New York.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Yesterday was a remarkable day at the Produce exchange. Never in the history of the exchange have the transactions in grain been so heavy. Fully 17,500,000 bushels of wheat changed hands in the course of five hours' trading. A million and a half of this was sold at the first call. Of the total transactions about 200,000 bushels were sold for June delivery, 4,000,000 bushels for July delivery, 4,000,000 bushels for August delivery, 6,000,000 bushels for September, 3,000,000 bushels for October, and 348,000 bushels for November. Corn also displayed great activity, over 300,000 bushels being sold. Of oats about 600,000 bushels changed hands. Some idea of the extent of these transactions may be obtained from the fact that the value of the wheat changing hands yesterday amounted to about $21,000,000.

What Caused the Failure.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 20.—Messrs. R. H. Parks & Co., bankers and brokers at No. 9 New street, announced to the Stock Exchange yesterday their inability to meet their engagements. The suspension is the sequel to the failure of M. S. Nichols & Co., of Chicago, who were involved in the collapse of McGeoch. Mr. Parks was seen by a reporter. "I am entirely solvent," he said, "all our affairs are straight here. This morning I was surprised by the refusal of M. S. Nichols & Co., of Chicago, to honor our drafts for $43,500. I cannot understand why this was done. I supposed that M. S. Nichols & Co. were worth a million and a half. The only explanation I have received is that Nichols & Co. were involved by the McGeoch failure. As soon as the drafts were dishonored I could do nothing but suspend. The action of Nichols & Co. injures my credit and almost breaks my heart. I am not a speculator. I am engaged in a legitimate business as sound as that of a bank. I won't allow anyone in my employ to speculate."

CALLING FOR MARGINS.

The Markets All Weak and Another Failure Reported.

CHICAGO, June 20.—This has proved another exciting day on 'change, and the condition of affairs has been very much strained. The great trading has changed over somewhat from provisions to wheat and corn, and the failures which have occurred in all lines have caused a suspicion of unsteadiness to attach to many of the heavier firms. Fluctuations in all the markets have been sharp and rapid and speculators have in consequence been calling indiscriminately for margins. One failure was announced during the forenoon, that of George Stewart & Co., who are reported long on wheat and lard. All markets up to noon displayed signs of weakness.

FAILED.

The markets all assumed a firmer tone toward the close. Although there was a severe drop in pork, it was altogether recovered just before the close. The firm of Daily & Co., who have been dealing heavily in pork, succumbed and so notified those with whom they had dealings. The liabilities are not ascertained. The rumor that Robert Lindblohm had failed is not true.

Still Balloting.

CONCORD, N. H., June 20.—A ballot for United States senator, in joint convention, resulted as follows: Whole number of votes cast 329. Necessary to a choice, 165. Scattering 4. Gilman Marston, 11; Aaron F. Stevens, 18; James W. Patterson, 24; James F. Briggs, 26; Harry Bingham, 121; Edward H. Rollins, 125. There was no choice. Another vote will be taken at noon to-morrow. There were a few changes in the vote of yesterday, Rollins losing.

Dedicating a Monument.

CAMDEN, S. C., June 20.—The monument erected by the women of Kershaw county in memory of the confederate dead, was dedicated to-day. A grand military demonstration took place in which twenty companies participated. Senators Hampton and Butler, Governor Thompson and other leading men were present. The ceremonies of the unveiling consisted of an artillery salute, a dedicatory prayer, an ode by the ladies and a memorial oration by Senator Hampton.

Coal Miners' Convention.

Brewing Statistics.

The Western Brewer, of Chicago, has published some interesting official statistics concerning the brewing business of the United States, whose enormous extent can be appreciated best when some of the figures relating to it are quoted. The total brews of the United States for the year ending May 1, 1883, was 17,349,424 barrels, of 31 gallons each, a net increase over the preceding year of 733,062 barrels, or an increase of 4.41 per cent. The state brewing the most beer is New York, which comes to the front for the year with 5,843,254 barrels. Pennsylvania follows with 2,706,946; then comes Ohio, with 1,585,852; Wisconsin, 1,238,183; Illinois, 1,071,403, and Missouri, 1,022,659. Of the states which brewed Alabama comes lowest with a product of eight barrels, while Arkansas, Florida, Maine, Mississippi and Vermont produced no beer at all. Of the cities, New York heads the list, with 3,239,908 barrels, followed by Philadelphia, 1,023,514; Milwaukee, 986,388; St. Louis, 943,360; Brooklyn, 836,379; Cincinnati, 772,302; Boston, 756,140; Chicago, 676,553. This places St. Louis fourth in the list of beer-producing cities, which is a step backward as compared with last year, when she was third, the little Wisconsin town having given her the go-by. The old rival, Chicago, however, is distanced, the city by the lake being given only the eighth place.

Granite Reconstruction.

At a special meeting of the board of public improvements this morning, July 3 was set as the date for receiving bids for reconstructing the following streets with granite: Walnut street from the wharf to Fourth street, and from Fifth to Seventh street; Pine street from Twelfth to Nineteenth street; Franklin avenue from the wharf to Third street, and Market street from Fourth to Ninth streets.

New Buildings.

Mr. S. H. Leathe is about to erect a brick dwelling house on the north side of Vandeventer place between Division place and Vandeventer avenue, which is estimated to cost $8,000.

The two brick dwelling houses, which Mr. J. B. Ghio is about to build on the north side of Cozzens avenue, between Grand and Spring avenues, are estimated to cost $6,000.

TO-DAY'S SPORT.

The Winners at the Cote Brilliante Track.

St. Louis vs. Mets Postponed—Association Games Elsewhere this Afternoon—The League Base Ball Games—Brighton Beach Races—Chester Park Running and Toledo Trotting Meetings To-Day.

The programme yesterday brought out several surprises and as a result an increased interest is felt in to-day's races. At one o'clock there was much life at the hotels, and all the public carriages seem to be employed. The track was sprinkled early this morning and is in superb condition. The heavens, however, began to look dubious at noon, and the turfmen were anxious. Postponement of any of the races is improbable. It was established at Louisville and Covington that horses can run in the mud, and to-day's programme will be run through, if it must be done between showers.

First Race.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

COTE BRILLIANTE RACE TRACK, June 20.—The track is pronounced very fast. Light clouds temper the warmth of the sun. They also suggest rain, but the weather wise predict that it will hold off until night. The attendance is large considering the report of rain. The grand stand presents as usual a brilliant appearance, and St. Louis' best society has turned out again. There are eight starters for the first race, Robert Bruce being withdrawn, having lamed himself in the stable this morning.

In the first race Freeland sells against the field $100 to $50. There is some mysterious backing of Black Gal. The jocks are: Quebec (Richardson), Flanders (Weathers), Bingen (Church), Freeland (Fuller), Golden Plover (Hagens), Gallio (Cary), Black Gal (Step), Boz Skedam (Farley). Freeland was such a strong favorite that he was dropped from the pools, which then sold: Black Gal, $40; Quebec, $30; Flanders, $25; Bingen, $25; Boz Sedam, $15; field, $10. Bingen cut up badly and could only be brought to the post after being blindfolded. Flanders was badly left Boz Sedam taking the lead. On the back stretch, Freeland was fourth, and Black Gal away back. Boz Sedam kept the lead all around. Entering the stretch Freeland closed up well, but Farley put the bone to Boz Sedam all the way home and won by a half length. They passed the wire in the following order: Baz Sedam, Freeland, Flanders, Bingen, Quebec, Black Gal, Gallio, Golden Plover. Time 1:29. Gallio ran away at the finish and went clear around the track. Books paid $10 for 1 on winner. French mutuals paid $56.

The Second Race.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

COTE BRILLIANTE RACE TRACK, June 20.—The second race, turf handicap, Pearl Thorn and Checkmate were scratched at the post. Pools sell: Pearl Jennings, 225, Force 120, Saunterer 100, Gilmore 70. This was one of the most exciting races ever run on the track. At the first quarter Pearl Jennings and Gilmore were neck and neck, with Force and Saunterer two lengths behind and together. At the turn of the stretch Jennings began to cut the pace and went to the fore to the half. They ran in a bunch and then Force and Jennings ran together. Saunterer then made a wonderful burst, and got a lead of a length. Jennings, it could be seen, was beaten, and everybody cried out, "Saunterer wins." He came into the home stretch a good length ahead, and then Stovall showed what a wonderful rider he is, and the crowd yelled, "Look at Force coming; Stovall is the captain," and so he was, for he landed old Force a winner in 2:11 by a good half length, with Saunterer (Blaylock) second, Harry Gilmore (McCormack) third, Jennings (Pal Duffy) last.

SUMMARY.

The Turf Handicap—For all ages, $500 to the winner; $10 entrance to be paid at time of naming (no entry valid unless so paid), to be equally divided between second and third horses; $20 additional for starters, to be equally divided between first and second horses. One and a quarter miles.

Third Race.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

COTE BRILLIANTE RACE TRACK, June 20.—Rain commenced to fall shortly after the second race and there is an appearance of heavy rain. Pools sold: Manitou, $125; McBowling, $65; field $30. The horses acted badly, Lucy A. going through the hedge. On the fourth trial they got away, Lew Glenn and Lucy A. getting the worst of it. The heat was between McBowling and Manitou, both being whipped in, McBowling winning by a neck. First, McBowling, Yettman; second, Manitou, Barnes; third, Lucy A., Richardson; Lew Glenn distanced. Time, 1:19. Rain fell briskly for ten minutes after the race, but it is clearing rapidly.

SECOND HEAT.

Pools sold before second heat, McBowling, $165; field, $70. The rain has quit, and the sky is clear. The track is very heavy. Lucy A. left at the post by a full furlong. McBowling led at the start, and held it until the stretch was entered, when Manitou pressed him hard. Yettman whipped McBowling hard, but Manitou won easily by a length in 1:22—very good time for the track.

SUMMARY.

Selling Race—Purse $250; horses entered to be sold for $1,500 to carry full weights; for $1,000 to carry 5 lbs; for $750, 10 lbs; for $500, 15 lbs; for $300, 20 lbs; winner to be sold after the race, one-half surplus given to second horse, balance to the association. THE HIGH LICENSE BILL

The city council continued in session until half-past three o'clock this morning. After the appropriation had been duly considered, which consumed the time between seven o'clock last night until three o'clock this morning, the council took up the Downing high license ordinance, which was passed by the following vote: Ayes—Cummings, Devoy, Rowse, Scudder, Stone, Vastine, and President Parker. A GRADUAL RISE.

The River Slowly Encroaching Upon Levee Warehouses.

Hopes that the Worst of the Flood is Over—Some Stores Above the Bridge Inundated—A Snake Story—In the Lumber Districts—The Railroads.

The river is still rising gradually, but the predictions of the pessimists who had foretold a flood four feet deep on all the first floors of warehouses fronting on the levee have fallen short of realization luckily, and promises so to continue. The bottom lands of the Missouri and its feeders are holding in reserve the overflow which will be paid out, gradually sustaining the high stage of water for several days, which is vastly preferable to the sudden rise and rush which had been looked for. For the twenty-four hours ending at seven o'clock this morning the rise was only seven inches, and from 7 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. it was one inch, which is at exactly the same rate, tending to show that there is, as yet, no indication of the sudden influx which many dreaded would appear about this time and sweep every thing before it. The water varies from curb-high to a trifle lower along the levee below the bridge, but above it nearly all the sidewalks are covered as far as Cherry street, while several of the lower floors are inundated. Out from this part of the levee are lying such boats as the Centennial, War Eagle, Spread Eagle, and others whose wharfboats lie below, but cannot be reached because of the high water, which has reduced the height of the bridge arches above the river to fifty-two feet, which is from eight to ten feet lower than is required for their passage. These boats are having a dull time of it, the depth and swift current of the water on the levee between them and dry land making loading a hazardous experiment which very few teamsters care about making.

A surprising feature of the flood is the apparent apathy or resignation with which the river men seem to regard it. Where so much is at stake it might naturally be expected that almost all of them would be in constant communication with their agents in the districts which are under water and whose condition is the criterion by which future events may be gauged here. Such is not the case, however, and it was not until the river man invaded the office of Capt. John P. Keiser, president of the Anchor lines, that he was able to glean regarding the condition of affairs up the Missouri river. This was conveyed in the following telegram, which was received at 10:30 this morning:

HERMANN, MO., June 20, 1883.

John P. Keiser, St. Louis:

River rose two inches. Water now is over Loutre island bottom. C. D. EITSEN.

This telegram is of of a reassuring nature, as the rise at Hermann was much more rapid previously. Still the situation here is such that only a small additional rise will be sufficient to seriously embarrass business on the levee. The railroad is eighteen inches under water throughout a large part of its extent, and the water, now plashing against the curb-stones, lacks but an inch or two of an invasion of some of the most important business houses on the levee. While the dry weather lasts, however, there is hope that even the present stage may be the highest reached. The hot weather is looked upon by many as of evil omen, as it may presage another storm, which, if it were to prove of any extent and to fall over the wrong place, would set all doubts and fears at rest and, possibly, result in a flood hardly inferior to the famous high water of 1844.

No boats having arrived from up the Missouri it is impossible as yet to glean the interesting information with which rivermen fresh from the overflowed districts will be laden on their arrival. None are expected before Friday, so that in the meantime such facts as are supplied by the overland routes must be relied upon. The Sidney, of the Diamond Joe Line, from St. Paul, will be here this evening and in anticipation of her coming, the tug Gartside was engaged this morning in shoving her wharfboats further inland on the levee.

The stage of water at seven o'clock this morning was exactly thirty-three feet, which is just eight inches at Ward & Brady's store, where the gauge has been kept ever since and including the great rise of 1844. The following diagram shows the relative height of the various floods since the great one of 1844, as taken from the gauge kept in a pillar at Ward & Brady's store, 517 North Levee. The horizontal line marks the level of the ground floor, which is identical with the sidewalk elevation of the levee at this point. The figures above this line indicate the heights of the different high waters. Immediately below is the mark for 1876 and lower down the government gauge, which is now under water.

THE FLOOD RECORD.

1844, 8 feet above levee.
1858, 3 feet 6 inches above levee.
1851, 3 feet 4 inches above levee.
1881, May 5, 4 inches above levee.
Store floor. Levee Level.

33 feet 8 inches above low water.
1876, 32 feet 10 inches above low water.
1882, 32 feet 7 inches above low water.
City Directrix. Zero on the gauge.
Low water.

The following is a record of the greatest heights of the river for the past twenty-three years, which will be found of interest just now: May 15, 1861, 31.9; April 26, 1862, 30.3; March 4, 1863, 33.8; May 14, 1864, 32.6; July 28, 1865, 32.6; April 25, 1866, 28.2; May 1, 1867, 32.5; May 15, 1868, 32.9; July 26, 1869, 28.2; April 16, 1870, 28.5; March 17, 1871, 31; June 12, 1872, 31.3; April 13, 1873, 29.2; June 20, 1874, 31; August 3, 1875, 31.5; May 10, 1876, 26.6; June 14, 1877, 26.9; July 15, 1878, 28.2; July 3, 1879, 30.31; May 5, 1881, 34; 1882, 32.7. The high water of 1884 occurred on June 15, that of 1851, June 25, and that of 1858, June 23.

A TRUE SNAKE STORY.

A sufferer from the flood who had evidently been drowned out of his home among the rank vegetation of the Illinois bottom opposite the city, met with an untimely fate in front of Grif. Prather's this morning. He had become tired of country life with its occasional inundations, and, breasting the waves, had struck out for the city, which he reached at about nine o'clock. Several old rivermen saw him wiggling about on top of the water, but, fearing that he was only the delusive symptom of an old complaint's reappearance, they said nothing, and took a little something medicinally in order to stave off what they considered to be a threatened attack. By the time that the visitor approached dry land, however, several parties of less experience in the line of hallucinations boldly pronounced him to be a water-snake of enormous size and of very poisonous propensities. Henry Schroeder, porter for J. G. Prather, armed with a broom and backed up by Acting Harbor-Master E. W. Ford and Captain Ed. Spencer, his able deputy, made an attack upon the snake directly he reached shallow water and pinned him to the ground. After having swam so hard for a foothold the snake was not going to give up without a struggle, and it was not until he had been badly mashed that he surrendered his life. As soon as it was assured that he had lost all power to do harm the foot-rule was applied to him, when it was found that he measured a trifle over seven feet in length. Had he been permitted to reach shore he would have proved a troublesome customer. Unfortunately he was allowed to drift away with the current, a valuable curiosity being lost in this way.

THE LUMBER DISTRICTS.

There is nothing particularly new to report regarding the inundated district in the northern portion of the city. Men were working all last night, and have been engaged for the last three nights on the levees around the lumber district to prevent an overflow. The greatest danger is now thought to have passed, and the best posted men give it as their opinion that the river will be stationary to-morrow. The water is rushing in through the new-made levee along Kennett from Mallinckrodt to Dock street, but an extra force of twenty-five men were put to work last night, and they will be able to prevent an overflow of Kennett street if there should not be an additional rise of from twelve to eighteen inches.

AT CARONDELET.

The Jupiter furnace in Carondelet will be compelled to close if the water rises two or three inches more. The embankment around Tom's bucket factory broke yesterday, but was soon repaired, and now men are kept at work night and day in strengthening the bank and watching for breaks. The Missouri car-works are completely flooded and the damage will be very great.

The Railroads.

The situation of the railroads at noon to-day, in so far as they are affected by the high water and its results, is not materially changed from that of yesterday. The Wabash is still shut out from Kansas City and is sending all through business by way of the Missouri Pacific. Local trains are run as far west as Randolph bluffs, five miles this side of Kansas City, and passengers from local points along the line are transferred to Kansas City by boat from the bluffs. "The Council Bluffs division is badly busted," said Major K. H. Wade this morning. "The Grand river is higher than it ever was before and it's raining 'great guns' again all along the line. At this moment there is no telling what the result may be. It's going to rain here, too, before night. From what I can see now I don't think the river will reach the highest point here inside of two or three days. All the rivers and streams northwest of here in which we are interested are rising rapidly and they are bound to be felt at this point. The through Council Bluffs train that we sent out last night, expecting it to go over the Humiston and Shenandoah railway, was delayed because of the going to pieces again of that road during the night, and now we expect to send it through over the C., B. & Q. If that fails we will keep on going farther north, but that train has got to get into Council Bluffs if it takes all summer to do it." The Platte river has submerged the St. Joe branch. On the east the Wabash remains intact. The C., B. & Q. is all right yet, and W. D. Sanborn said this morning: "We are the only line now open to Council Bluffs and points beyond. All our trains, including those on the Keokuk and St. Louis, are being sent out on time and are brought with little delay. Passengers are transferred at the Cuivre river by boat." The other roads on the west are not troubled at all with the plentiful fluid and anticipate no further difficulty. All the roads on the east side are yet undisturbed and only the prophesied rise of several feet yet will disturb them. Most of them say that they can stand from twelve to thirty inches more, but even a twelve-inch rise will virtually close them all out. The St. Louis and Cairo narrow gauge is submerged for a short distance at Fish lake, but not to a sufficient depth to hinder trains from crossing.

Madison Levee.

A report was circulated to-day that the Madison new levee was broken, but a telegram received from Mitchell at 3 p. m. said it was all right and would stand one foot of a rise yet.

At Jefferson City.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, MO., June 20.—The Missouri river is still rapidly rising and is now up to the high-water mark of 1881. In the last twelve hours it has risen six inches. All the lower bottom lands are flooded and the people are moving out. It now only lacks five feet from being up to the high-water mark of 1844, the highest the river was ever known to be. A great deal of damage has already been done to crops, and the greatest fears are entertained for the final result.

Railroad Meeting.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The executive committee of the directors of the Northern Pacific railroad to-day passed a resolution calling on the treasurer and general auditor to prepare and submit a statement showing the net earnings due to preferred stockholders at the close of the fiscal year, ending on the 30th inst. The uncompleted portion of the road is now 118 miles. It will be ready for travel, it is thought, by the end of August. The formal opening of the road will take place at the western portal of Mullin's tunnel, which is just west of Helena, Montana, early in September. It was stated that the lands fifty miles east of Bismarck, the capital of Dakota, are now selling at $5 per acre, an increase of $2 in less than a year.

Almost Lynched.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., June 20.—A negro named Jim Ball, eighteen years old, attempted to assault the eleven-year-old daughter of Edgar Lee, of Fairfax county, yesterday. He met the girl on the road and dragged her to a thicket, but was prevented from accomplishing his purpose by the arrival of persons who heard her cries. The boy was caught soon after and lodged in jail. There were threats of lynching and the boy was drawn up to a tree, but cooler counsels prevailed and he was permitted to go to jail.

Archbishop Woods Dying.

PHILADELPHIA, June 20.—At noon to-day Archbishop Woods' condition was unchanged. He is slowly sinking and death may occur at any hour. His bedside is surrounded by the bishops of the diocese and of the state, and the room is visited by almost the entire clergy of the city, who call to offer sympathy and receive, if possible, the last solemn blessing of the dying archbishop.

Mitchell's Denial.

CHICAGO, June 20.—A Daily News special from Milwaukee says: Alexander Mitchell has addressed a letter to the New York Tribune denying certain published reports to the effect that he was interested with McGeoch in his lard deal. He declares he never had any personal interest in grain or provision markets, and had always condemned attempts at cornering produce markets.

WASHINGTON.

Gen. Sherman Decides to Bring His Family to St. Louis.

He Expresses Some Original Opinions About Messrs. Whitelaw Reid and J. B. McCullagh—The Hill Investigation—Wasson Found Guilty—Gen. Ewing's Death—News from the Capital.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Gen. Sherman and family leave their home forever to-day, and, after a few months' recreation in the mountains and at the seaside, will take up their residence for the remainder of their lives at St. Louis. Gen. Sherman said, in talking of the change, that there were many reasons for their attachment to St. Louis. A special motive with Mrs. Sherman was that they have two children buried in Calvary cemetery there, and they have many warm and devoted friends there. He had been identified more or less with St. Louis since 1843. He had been thoroughly identified with the Lucases and Turner's, two of the oldest families in St. Louis. In 1853 he was an active partner in the banking house of Lucas, Turner & Co., in San Francisco. He had bought property in that part of the city now known as the Stoddard addition early in the fifties, and still owns some of it. He had returned to St. Louis just on the eve of the war, and accepted the presidency of the Fifth street railway. All this time he had maintained cordial relations with the people, and there were scores of houses where he would be just as welcome as he would be in his own home. "When I made up my mind to retire from the army," he said, "I determined to leave Washington. It is full of hollowness, hypocrisy and snobbery. I declare it is an indecency and a shame the way families are invaded here by newspaper reporters. There is no home privacy whatever. You cannot do a thing in Washington that a reporter is not at your door to find out about it. So I said, 'Ellen, you and the children select a home somewhere away from Washington. I will take you to Yonkers or New York or St. Louis, or anywhere you want to go, but decide the matter for once and all time.' After due consideration they settled on St. Louis, and I said, 'Now, that ends it. We will have no more discussion about it. St. Louis is the place.'" He was disposed to indulge in a tirade on newspapers and certain newspaper men. "Now," said he, "there's this fellow, Whitelaw Reid, of the Tribune. He's a treacherous cuss. He can write more lies to the column than any newspaper man in America. He ran like a scared wolf, too, at the battle of Shiloh. After the repulse of the first day he started to the rear, and never stopped running till he got to Cincinnati. He sent off a lot of lies to his paper, saying that our whole army had been beaten and cut to pieces, and was astonished to learn afterward that it was just the other way. And there's McCullagh, of the Globe-Democrat. He is a treacherous fellow. He used to worm secrets out of army officers and give them away. He has some brains, but I tell you I'd hate to hang my coat on his rack."

Sherman's Tour of Inspection.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—Gen. Sherman, accompanied by Col. Tidball of his staff, left here this morning for Buffalo, where he will be joined by Chief Justice Waite and Justice Gray. From there the party will start on their trip across the continent along the northern line of the United States, inspecting all of the military posts en route. Gen. Sherman would have postponed his departure until after the funeral of Gen. Ewing, but one day's delay in starting would have disarranged all the plans throughout the entire trip, which had been carefully mapped out with the dates for arrivals at certain points and escorts provided to meet the party along the route. Col. Bacon of Gen. Sherman's staff was to have accompanied the party, but decided to remain here on account of the illness of his wife.

The Hill Investigation.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—When the Hill investigation committee assembled to-day before the regular proceedings began, Coleman called attention to the published reports of his remarks yesterday in which he is quoted as having said that the cheek displayed by this defense in asking the committee to limit the investigation to the fraud in the Philadelphia post-office building is only equalled by the amount of fees taken by the government counsel in the star route case. Coleman said: "What I supposed I said was that it was only equaled by the amount of fees paid to the counsel by the government in those cases and my allusion to this fact at all was only to show how much more energetically this administration prosecuted alleged frauds in the post-office department than they do frauds connected with these building contracts. It shows how differently the administration investigate a case when they are anxious to do something and a case when they are not."

Thomas in reply charged that the gentleman's remarks were intended for influence and effect outside the room where this investigation is being carried on. Coleman called attention to the requisition made some days since by the prosecution for all the papers in the case of Bartlett, Robbins & Co., and said this requisition has not yet been fully complied with, nor have we any means of knowing to what extent.

Three clerks in the supervising architect's office were sworn and testified to having looked through the files of the office for the purpose of obtaining the papers called for by Coleman, and they said that all the papers bearing upon the subject had been produced. Murch was then sworn and answered the usual questions as to his residence, occupation, etc. The witness had been a stone-cutter from 1859 to within six years. Witness worked both as a journeyman stonecutter and as a foreman in dressing granite for the Philadelphia building. During the time he worked there the 15 per cent contract was in force with the Dix Island Granite Co. Men were instructed as to the length of time they should occupy in cutting each stone. The superintendent made estimates, and if a man finished a particular stone in a less time, he was kept jobbing until the estimated time expired. Witness worked about one hundred and forty days upon one stone, and he believed he could have done the work in forty or fifty days.

Question—"Why did you work one hundred and forty days upon one stone?"

Answer—"Because I was working under instructions."

Witness believed the work under the fifteen per cent contracts was much better performed than under the modified contracts. Witness recited several instances coming under his own observation where men were carried on the pay rolls and paid by the government where they were not performing any service. Witness believed that modified contracts yielded to contractors from 200 to 300 per cent profit and were grossly unfair to the government, based as they were upon extravagant prices paid for dressing stone under the 15 per cent contracts. Witness appeared before the commission, of which Assistant Secretary French and Mr. Hill were members, and testified to all the facts as just related by him, and called Hill's attention to the unfairness of the modified contracts which he (Hill) then proposed making. Counsel for the defense wished to postpone the cross-examination of Murch until to-morrow, to which prosecution assented. Several letters and other documentary evidence relating to the Philadelphia building were then offered, after which Gen. Steinmetz was recalled and questioned as an expert relative to certain alterations in the plans for the building. The committee adjourned till to-morrow.

The lower stories were occupied by O'Connor & Moffatts, dry goods, and the upper by the Olympic club. It is believed the fire originated in the rooms of the latter. The loss is estimated at $150,000, mostly covered by insurance.

Robt. Williams, division freight agent of the O. & M. at Springfield, Ill., is in the city to-day.

H. A. Gibbons, assistant chief engineer, and C. E. Fuller, roadmaster of the Vandalia, are in the city to-day.

C. S. Sawyer, general manager of the Continental fast freight line at Cincinnati, and A. B. Terhule, foreign freight agent of the B. & O., are in town to-day.

The Central Christian Sunday school and the morning Sunday school, six coaches in all, went to Creve Cœur lake this morning over the Wabash for a day's picnic.

C. J. Waller, G. F. A., of the Mobile & Ohio railway, wife and daughter, who have been residing in the city for several days, left last night for Chicago, to attend the exposition.

The regular monthly meeting of fast-freight line agents of the country will be held at Philadelphia, June 27 and 28, and the St. Louis agents that attend will leave Sunday night by the C. & A.

The opening of the Jersey Shore, Pine Creek and Buffalo railway is announced for June 26, and St. Louis railroad men are all invited to attend and help to eat the sandwiches and drink the hydrant water.

The Wabash took 120 car loads of stock into Chicago from the west during the twenty-four hours ending at eight o'clock this morning. About 100 cars went in between six and eight o'clock.

Mr. I. W. McMunn, superintendent of the American Brake Company, leaves to-night for Chicago to spend a few days at the exposition. Thence he goes to Cincinnati, and from there to New England. The Brake Company has just closed with the Cincinnati Southern to equip 400 fruit cars with the automatic brake, the cars to be used in the transportation of southern fruits to northern markets and to be run as sections of passenger trains.

The Vandalia, despite rumors and statements to the contrary, will run excursions to the Chicago exposition and to the Pullman regatta, on the 21st and 22d, at the rate of $5 for the round trip. All the lines doing business to Chicago have made the round trip rate on those days $5, and many will take advantage of it.

Mr. W. C. Audrews, general western passenger agent of the Montreal and Boston air-line, at Chicago, is in the city to-day, working up St. Louis summer business to the summer resorts and cool places of the north-east. The M. & B. A. L. is composed of eight of the principal roads of New York and New England, and taps the finest summer resort sections of that country.

Sam Walker, for some time record clerk in H. M. Hoxie's office, has accepted the position of assistant to T. L. Ely, assistant superintendent of telegraph of the southwestern system at Marshall, Texas, and has gone there to begin work.

The regular monthly meeting of the St. Louis Association will be held in the office of the secretary, J. M. Chesbrough, this afternoon. Following this meeting the regular monthly business meeting of the association will be held at the same place.

Mr. S. R. Taylor, traveling freight agent for the consolidated systems, returned to the city this morning from an extended trip through Mexico. While gone he traversed both the Mexican National and Mexican Central railways, stopping at all the important cities along the line. He describes the commercial openings in that country as wonderful and little appreciated by the capital, industry and brains of the north that is casting about for occupation. Hotels, good hotels, is the cry of everybody who has made the trip, and for the amount of capital required is now considered as the finest opening for investment offered by the country.

H. A. Fisher, advertising agent of the consolidated systems, is getting out an immense folder descriptive of the Wabash. It will be eighteen by twenty-four inches in size, giving on one side a complete railroad map of the entire United States, and on the other the time-tables of all the divisions of the immense system, beside much information not usually found on folders. Fisher has gained an enviable reputation as an ink distributor, and he seems to be reaching out for greater conquests in that line.

The O. & M. trains Nos. 3 and 5 were delayed five hours this morning near Vincennes, Indiana, by the breaking of a tender axle. The engine of No. 4, which was ahead of No. 5, was derailed also four or five hours. Strange to say though no one was hurt in the least and the damage done was very little. No. 3 came in at 12:15 o'clock and No. 5 at 12:30 o'clock.

A BIG ASSIGNMENT.

The Williamson-Stewart Paper Company Fail For Over $200,000.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Williamson-Stewart paper company, held this morning, it was resolved that the company was indebted beyond its ability to pay its creditors in full, and, therefore, an assignment was executed. The president, Charles Stewart, accordingly made an assignment in the name of the company, to J. P. Whyte. The assets assigned consisting of book accounts, notes, paper and envelopes, etc., general stock, etc., at 209 and 211 N. Main street, valued at $152,000, subject to deed of trust for nearly $100,000.

The house was closely barred up as soon as the assignment was made, and a ticket on the door bore the simple announcement, "closed." A POST-DISPATCH reporter knocked, but was refused admittance. Several persons gathered around the door, looked through the glass at the clerks at work upon the books inside, shook their heads and passed on. Mr. C. R. Williamson at length came out upon the sidewalk and gave audience to the reporter. He said that the Williamson-Stewart Paper company was organized six years ago by Chas. Stewart, Joseph E. Lawton, Geo. Lane and himself.

The capital stock was $50,000, one-half paid up at the time and $15,000, since. Mr. Stewart was not an active resident member of the concern. Lawton was manager up to last year, when a change became necessary and he, Mr. Williamson, assumed the lead. The immediate cause of the assignment was a threat on the part of Lawton to call for the appointment of a receiver. The balance of stock had been called in, and Lawton failed to comply in respect to his interest. For five years past the house had sustained heavy losses. The liabilities could be placed at $219,500, of which $100,000 were preferred creditors' claims. The assets were placed at $202,385, including open accounts $96,000, stock $96,000, and bills receivable $10,000.

THE AFTERNOON SESSION

was called to order promptly at two o'clock by President Colman. A letter from Secretary Smith announced that Mayor Ewing, acting under a misapprehension of the time at which he would be expected to deliver his address of welcome, had made an important business engagement for half-past one o'clock, thus precluding the possibility of his presence this afternoon. Congressman J. H. McLean, a member of the association, in the absence of the mayor, and at very short notice, therefore, delivered the welcoming address to the convention. He said:

"Mr. President and Gentlemen: I had not the slightest idea that I would ... for the honor of welcoming you to St. Louis. I don't intend to make a speech. The only thing for us to do is to discuss such subjects as are of interest and of benefit to ourselves. Every word uttered here will be read by hundreds of people. I hope you will receive such a welcome here as will cause you to remember St. Louis. We are glad to see you and we shall be happy to do everything in our power to make your visit to St. Louis agreeable."

President Colman in behalf of the association extended the thanks of the convention to Dr. McLean for his hearty words of welcome. He could say with Dr. McLean that it gave him great pleasure to welcome the delegates. The nurserymen and florists were doing much to beautify the land, to cause it to blossom as the rose. It was not so long ago that the nurserymen of the country numbered only a few hundred now there are millions of dollars invested in the business. The object of the association is to bring members into close union, to elevate the profession and to make it as respectable as any profession in the land. There is no profession which offers so many inducements. All the so-called learned professions are over-crowded, but in the nurserymen's profession there is plenty of room, especially in the upper story. There is no profession which requires greater intellectual ability. Our colleges, universities and schools are appreciating this fact, and it is a good sign for the times. He spoke at some length on the subject of transportation. He recommended that some good business man be employed to attend railroad freight conventions to insist upon the rights of nurserymen. He referred to the excessive taxation imposed upon nursery products. Another matter to which he called attention was that of tree agents. The tree agent is a necessity. He has done a great deal of good. There are black-sheep among them, but there is a remedy for that.

At the conclusion of President Colman's address the convention proceeded with the regular order of business.

RIVER IMPROVEMENT.

Secretary Wright Explains the Progress of the Work for a Convention.

The Merchants' Exchange of this city has commenced an extensive movement for the purpose of agitating the subject of river improvement in the Mississippi valley. In an interview with a POST-DISPATCH reporter on the subject this morning, Geo. L. Wright, secretary of the exchange committee said:

"At a meeting which was called by the Merchants' Exchange about the middle of March to take into consideration this matter, a permanent committee was appointed consisting of J. C. Ewald, E. O. Stanard, N. McEnn is, Alex H. Smith, Frank Gainnie, Henry C. Haarstick, D. R. Francis and myself. Shortly afterwards we issued an invitation circular to all the commercial bodies, the cities and towns in the Mississippi Valley, embodying a resolution to the effect that it is highly desirable that a representative of each of the various committees appointed by commercial bodies and towns of this valley in the interests of river improvements, be chosen by each such committee as a member of an executive commit ee on river improvements and at the same time asking such elected representatives to meet in St. Louis, on July 11, of this year, for the purpose of devising some plan of action which will unite the commercial interests of the whole Mississippi valley in the work of securing sufficient appropriation, from the general government to make our great water ways navigable the year round. The circular has been responded to with a great deal of enthusiasm and thus far we have reports from four commercial bodies in the different towns and cities scattered throughout the valley. It is probable that from sixty to eighty such commercial bodies will be represented in the convention when it meets, as reports are still coming in daily. Among the places that have already responded may be mentioned Memphis, Tenn.; Vicksburg, New Orleans, Davenport, Dubuque, Burlington, Clinton, Iowa; Quincy, Winona, St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Charles, Mo.; Wichita, Kas.; Minneapolis, Pittsburg, Louisville, Cincinnati, and others."

"What is to be the work of this convention?" asked the reporter.

"To take into consideration a plan of uniting the people of the valley in an effort to secure the necessary appropriations for river improvements. The geographical position of this city, as well as the position which it occupies in a commercial point of view, makes it incumbent upon us as the representatives of its commercial interests, to take the initiative in this movement. It is quite likely that this convention will make arrangements for the meeting of another, to take place in September at some important point, either further up the river or below. That convention will probably be a fuller representation of the people of this region and its interests. From forty to five hundred delegates will, no doubt, be present.

"Will any improvements, outside those belonging strictly to the Mississippi, be considered?"

"Certainly. What we want is an outlet for the vast and ever increasing products of this whole region. At one time the East was the important part of the nation, and all appropriations were expended there. Now a change has dawned upon us. We are in the center of the largest grain-producing region of the world. The Mississippi is the natural outlet for this grain, and we want the general government to make it navigable the year round, so that it can be made a regulator of rates for transportation to the Atlantic seaboard. From forty to fifty millions can be expended on the Mississippi to a good advantage, and we want the commercial interests to unite as one man and have the work commenced as soon as possible. If the people of the entire valley rise up and present their claims before the congress of the United States, there is no doubt that congress will give the matter proper attention. This work commenced now may go on for years. This is the proper course to pursue in freeing ourselves from the control of monopolies that fix rates for transportation to the Atlantic coast."

"Is there much grain transported by the river route at present?"

"By the reports I think the river is doing its full share in that direction now. New Orleans is keeping pretty well up with New York in the transportation of corn and also in other grains. We here in St. Louis, have elevators enough and can provide storage enough for all the grain that may be pushed in here on us at any time. We want to be able to send that grain to foreign markets when we please without being at any time compelled to yield to the dictates of monopolies that control rates by rail, and the river, when improved, will place us in that position.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING AT 1 P. M.

Receipts of wheat were larger again to-day, and 21 cars inspected No. 2 red. It is said that 40 cars more No. 2 will be in to-morrow.——Reliable report has it that R. Lindblohm & Co., of Chicago, have sold out all their long wheat, and are all right up to the present time.——A telegram from New York says: R. H. Parks & Co., whose failure was reported yesterday, have paid up in full and resumed business.——Margin calling has been very heavy during the past four or five days—"absolutely sickening," as one bull remarked—but the longs have all responded promptly, and so far the condition of affairs in this market is healthy and the situation O. K.——Two more failures reported in Chicago this forenoon. Geo. Stewart & Co., and Sam'l Daily, both in the provision business. Calls for margins in Chicago on wheat this morning were 10c a bushel. Some of the leading Chicago houses are notifying their St. Louis correspondents not to take any new business while the present trouble is going on. The situation in wheat looked ticklish this morning when the market opened. The Chicago curb was lower. Early dispatches from New York reported ½c decline and all the other markets were off in price and weak. The Liverpool cable told the same tale of a dull market, though reporting no change in value. Besides the decline in Chicago, came telegrams from that market that further financial troubles were apprehended. The outlook was discouraging and local operators were nervous and the general crowd inclined to sell. A break off in price of over 1c followed as a consequence of the bearish feeling and reports, but then was checked and prices, after fluctuating in an uncertain way for some time, finally commenced climbing upward, being encouraged thereto by a steady recovery in Chicago and more favorable reports from other points. The feeling gradually waxed stronger as other markets improved more and more, and finally there was an active demand prevailing that carried prices up sharply, especially as sellers became very scarce. The close was strong at advances of 1½c for July and year, 1⅜c for August, 1⅜ for September, and 1½ for October over yesterday's close. Corn was notable for the very few changes there were in price. The near-by futures sold lower early, but were in active demand at the decline and subsequently advanced, while all else were stronger all through. The close was strong, but entirely nominal, with July and August ¼c higher, September ⅝c higher, October ⅝c higher and year ½c better. Oats still dull, but firm. Cash wheat was about nominal, very little being offered for sale, and the demand not amounting to anything. After the call a little No. 2 red sold higher. No. 2 mixed corn for cash was lower, but in fair order demand, and No. 2 white mixed was easier, but all the other grades advanced were firm and met a good demand. Oats were steady and quiet, the small supply selling when offered.

CATTLE—The supply to-day was very full, the arrivals and those left over from yesterday amounting to over one hundred and sixty loads, a large portion of which were half-fatted and thin Texans; good light and medium weight steers were scarce, and being most in request were well maintained in price. Common stuff of all descriptions and coarse heavy cattle were weak, unsettled and lower. Buyers were well represented, both the sea-board and interior markets having quite a number of purchasers present, who commenced trading early and getting cattle pretty much at their own figures, they showed more than their usual willingness to take hold. Butchers' cattle sold well, buyers taking both natives and Texans quite freely. On the whole, a good trade was had during the morning, but at prices far from satisfactory to salesmen, who, however, saw the inevitable, and were obliged to give in or have their stock left upon their hands. Values, as revised, are weak and bearish at the following

HOGS—Market weak and unsettled at a decline of 5c. Buyers were present in good numbers, and shippers apparently had orders to fill, but they purchased in a dragging sort of a way, their evident object being to worry salesmen into a further reduction of prices, and there was every prospect that they would succeed, as the pens were full, the arrivals amounting close on to 100 car loads and advices from other markets being of a decidedly unfavorable tenor. The morning's transactions were at $6 10@6 25 for Yorkers; $6 10 to $6 20 for mixed heavies, and $6 25@6 32½ for butchers. Quotations, owing to the unsettled condition of the market, are rather difficult to make. The opinion of the best informed among buyers and sellers was that prices would immediately go lower than the opening prices. The following, however, was given as the probable close: Light to really good Yorkers $5 90@6 20; mixed to good packing $5 65@6 20; good to extra butchers and shippers $6 15@6 30; pigs $5 25@5 75; skips and culls $5@5 25.

Anschutz, clerk, leaves on Wednesday, June 20, at 5 p. m., from St. Louis and St. Paul wharfboat.

JENKINS & SASS, General Agents,
508 North Commercial.

The Gem City will make an excursion on Saturday, adhering to the following time-card: Leave St. Louis, Saturday, June 23, at 4 p. m., arriving at Keokuk next afternoon at 2 p. m. Leave Keokuk Monday at 7 a. m., arriving at St. Louis Tuesday at 6 a. m., so that a business man will only lose one business day, Monday. The fare for the round trip, including meals and berth, under way and while in port at Keokuk, $6 50. Cheaper to travel than to stay at home.

This has been a remarkable season for getting out coal; for over four months there has been plenty of water, with the exception of a few days, and it is worthy of mention that in the face of the large shipments none of the down river markets seem to be very much overstocked. This being the case, it is evident that the consumption of Pittsburg coal is rapidly increasing, and new markets are being opened up every year, both west and south. While our coal men have been doing a large business, they claim that there has not been much money made.—[Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

Thanks for Timely Aid.

The following deserved compliment has been handed to Capt. J. W. Shea, of the Emma Etheridge:

Capt. Clinton B. Sears, United States engineer;

DEAR SIR—We are in receipt of a report from the master of our steamer, Henry Lourey, narrating the prompt and efficient aid rendered him on the 6th inst. near Tiptonville by your steamer, Emma Etheridge, Capt. Shea, at a time when an accident on board had well-nigh deprived the Lourey of her steam and of steering way for valuable tow. I desire to thank Capt. Shea most heartily for his good offices on this occasion and to offer compensation for the services of the Etheridge, should it be desired. Very truly yours,

HENRY C. HAARSTICK,
President.

Capt. Sears handed this to Capt. Shea this morning with a note that his action is fully approved.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1883.

AT the rate at which presidential aspirants are producing certificates of physical vigor, we shall probably have the nomination awarded as the prize in an athletic contest.

IT seems that the only objection to the Deceased Wife's Sister's bill as a cement of family ties in England is founded on the fact that the living wife's sister SARAH or SUSAN is too often at the bottom of all the family trouble.

WE note with approval the action of Mr. FREDERICK LAYTON, of Milwaukee, who proposes to give his city a $50,000 art hall without conditions. This is a great improvement on the frequent method of making gifts and loading them down with conditions.

Is the old man losing his grip? Right on the heels of the announcement that BUTLER had signed the appropriation bill for the Tewksbury alms-house comes the news that he has accepted the invitation of the president and fellows of Harvard college to be present at the commencement exercises.

DID we hear Mr. STONE say that he had heard a man say that the city would get $800,000 a year from the new license? We should like to have it, but we are afraid that that $800,000 is like the Spanish fleet so beautifully described by the poet who said:

"The Spanish fleet thou canst not see because
It is not yet in sight."

THERE was a $2,000 bail bond forfeited in the county yesterday. As the bond was given for Mr. BEAUCLEIGH, who can easily make that amount in a month by the exercise of his industry, it is probable that collateral for that amount was put up, but if ever the money is paid into court we shall be glad to mention it.

THE nomination of a prohibition ticket makes the Ohio republicans feel how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child. The prohibitionists are indeed shockingly ungrateful, and according to the republican papers they are making fools of themselves. It seems to be regretted in some quarters that there is no law to make them vote the republican ticket.

WE like to sit at the feet of eastern journalism, so to speak, and learn how to do it. Here is the New York Truth, edited by the gifted and brilliant OAKEY HALL, which heads an editorial article with the wild, weird head-line, "A disaster parallel to the bridge one." The western mind is lost in admiration of the intricate convolutions of the eastern brain which can speak of the Sunderland disaster as "a disaster parallel to the bridge one."

OUR admiration for the chivalrous Louisiana theological student who murdered the seducer of his betrothed is somewhat diminished by the news that the young lady was not seduced, and was not his betrothed. These trifling errors in the career of the Rev. Mr. T. Jenkins, jr., of Louisiana, will probably be overlooked by an appreciative community, and he will live to expound the gospel to admiring congregations.

THE ministry and some [illegible] of France have greeted [illegible] with as much display as can be gained by bombarding a defenseless city and capturing a [illegible], but the brutal disregard of international rights shown by France in Madagascar, as well as in Tunis and Tonquin, and wherever bullying was safe, will not help the French republic among Americans, who understand that one of the duties of a free country is to respect the freedom of others.

WHEN BRADY was first accused we were told that his suddenly acquired fortune was the result of lucky speculation in Bell telephone stocks. Since his acquittal it is announced that he has recently made another million or so in Rio Grande stock, while poor DORSEY has nothing left but a pitiful half million tied up in a cattle ranch out west. Neither one of them ever had anything till he became a political boss, and the millions the government has saved since they were exposed render all further explanations of their wealth superfluous.

MR. TILDEN should put an end to this contradictory testimony about his robustitude. While WATTERSON describes him as HAMLET described his martial father, other gentlemen insist that "the old man cannot lift either hand to his mouth, both arms being paralyzed so that he has to be fed with a [illegible] ported by two attendants." Mr. TILDEN might easily settle this dispute by coming out of his hermit-like seclusion and exhibiting himself on foot or on horseback where the general public can see him.

CINCINNATI has been attitudinizing before the world as the center of culture, and a bored and weary world has preferred to accept all of its claims, no matter how bogus and fraudulent they were, rather than discuss the question. But occasionally some little inconsistency between the claims set forth and the reality will crop out which Cincinnati has a right hard time explaining away. Here, for instance, is the case of Mr. KELLY, for many years a city father of Cincinnati. Instead of passing his leisure hours in visiting the private art treasures of Walnut Hills or admiring the chaste sculpture of the PROBASCO fountain, Mr. KELLY prefers to tilt a chair up against the wall of the engine-house and talk base ball with the boys. This has its poetic side, but there is no poetry in Mr. KELLY's conduct when he pulls out his revolver and resents the familiarities of one of the boys by putting a bullet as near his heart as he can get it. This is what Mr. KELLY has done, however, and so far as we can learn Mr. KELLY is, in every sense of the word, a representative citizen and favorite son of Cincinnati.

WOMEN AT THE BAR.

The admission of a lady to the bar of Philadelphia is an innovation which should spread with a more rapid growth, as we do not know of any profession which stands more in need of the civilizing and restraining influence of woman's presence than the profession and practice of the law. It really looks as if there was an epidemic of bad temper and bad manners among those who ought to bring into the court-house a sentiment of personal dignity and propriety. Personal altercations are frequent (the city of St. Louis has furnished its fair share of them); exchanges of personalities are frequently followed up by altercations out of court; and it is the exception to hear of a closely-contested or long-continued trial in which the legal issues are not laid aside at the bidding of personal anger.

This is an injury to every interest involved, and it sometimes injures the innocent client in a most striking manner. Our specials from New York reported the sensational incident in the trial of JOHN DEVOY, for libel, in which Mr. DEVOY's mistaken counsel undertook to insult the complainant, BELMONT, by a most degrading insinuation. There can be no doubt that this superfluous piece of blackguardism helped Mr. DEVOY to get a sentence of sixty days' imprisonment which he might have otherwise avoided.

It is true that the lady lawyers who have thus far appeared on the scene have caught the spirit of their legal brothers and have helped to make things right lively for the judges and spectators at various intervals, but this, we think, has been because they were so few that their position has been a most trying one. The more general admission of women to the practice of the law would undoubtedly be a good thing.

A FISH STORY.

"H. W." will have to hie him back to Greystone and issue a revised and improved TILDEN health bulletin. His last is utterly eclipsed by a later one forwarded by "J. H. W." to the Cincinnati Enquirer from the home of Mr. HENDRICKS. It appears that when the WATTERSON manifesto reached Indianapolis, Mr. HENDRICKS roused his Boswell out of bed at four o'clock in the morning, and literally wore him out in a weary day-long tramp of many miles, through bush and through brake, up and down the banks of White river, casting for bass and croppie. Mr. HENDRICKS waded in and caught two buckets of minnows for bait, which exposed his toes to the inspection of his companion, who declares there was not even a scar upon any one of them. The only conversation of a political nature between the two that could be disclosed without a breach of propriety, is thus reported verbatim:

I finally said:

"Governor, don't you think we have had enough of this?"

He smiled, and in his dry, half-pitying, half-sarcastic way said:

"If you are tired you can lay down on the bank and I will fish for you."

The account closes with this pathetic finale:

How I followed the governor through the weary thirteen miles along the curves of the river to this city I hardly know. It was dark when I staggered into my home so exhausted that my family were alarmed, and as I could not explain why I was in that condition, my wife telephoned to know if the governor had returned, saying that I seemed to be in a dangerous condition. Late as it was the governor walked at once to my house, a mile distant, to see that I had all needed attention. This mark of interested friendship shows his generous disposition. To-day I am just able to dictate this dispatch from my bed. I hear that the governor is arguing an important case in one of the courts.

After this presentation of the "old ticket" in the likeness of a kangaroo, with most of its strength in its hind legs, any day may bring us exciting news from Greystone. The exigencies of the situation seem to call for a wedding, or at least something in the nature of a desperate flying leap over a garden wall, with shot-gun accompaniments and subsequent divorce proceedings.

CHARLES II. never said a foolish thing and never did a wise one. The converse of this seems applicable to Gen. SHERMAN. Generally correct and wise in his conduct, he delights in wild talk for which nobody thinks of holding him seriously responsible. Here is his latest cranky outburst:

Dorsey was a splendid senator and Gen. Brady a hard-working, active man. Both of them seemed to me to be honorable men. What they did in the matter of the mail routes for which they have been tried was in the line of promoting the growth and development of the West. [illegible]

[illegible] ion a year has neither curtailed the mail facilities nor checked the development of the West, Gen. SHERMAN's tribute to BRADY and DORSEY as public benefactors is one that would disgrace any distinguished soldier except himself. He is a privileged character, especially as to his mouth, and whether he is kissing all the women in sight or talking like GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN, it is generally understood that he does not mean it.

THE people of St. Louis can hardly feel flattered on reading in the Globe-Democrat of this morning the following startling head-lines:

A CRIMINAL COMMUNITY.

ST. LOUIS WELL REPRESENTED IN THE POPULATION OF JOLIET PRISON.

Does the Globe-Democrat mean to intimate that St. Louis is a criminal community because it is so well represented in the Illinois state prison; or, if not, what does it mean?

THE NEW YORK PRESS.

The World to-day says: "Governor Butler knows how to return good for evil. He has accepted an invitation to attend the commencement exercises at Harvard university, and he will be there in all his glory. When the overseers oversee Benjamin sitting in all his effulgence on the right hand of the faculty, they will be likely to experience feelings similar to those which filled the bosom of the narrow-minded Haman when he saw Mordecai perched on the king's gate."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "We hear that three cadets of the graduating class of the naval academy who finished the four year's course last Saturday, have been dropped for color-blindness. It is remarkable that this defect was not discovered until the government had laid out several thousands of dollars on their education. No doubt it is intended that some shall receive an education who may not enter the service. But it is hardly intended to maintain those at the academy who are physically disqualified for the navy."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "Whether Judge Hoadley, Judge Geddes, Judge Thurman or General Ward shall receive the honor of a nomination from the Ohio democratic convention, is a matter of ephemeral interest, not likely to outlast the two brief years of the official term; but if the sages assembled at Columbus put in their platform the tariff plank foreshadowed in the dispatches, demanding 'a tariff for revenue, so adjusted as to afford equal protection to American industry, without creating monopolies,' and accompany it with a lucid explanation of how this can be done, they may go home with the conviction that they have done a work for all time."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "The collapse of a powerful clique of speculators, who have been trying to make a 'corner' in lard, is hailed as a public benefit. If it is so, why is not the formation of such a 'pool' held to be contrary to the public welfare? Why are not speculators, if they seek to fix unnaturally high prices upon any of the articles of prime necessity, held to be public enemies?"

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "Unless there occurs a very marked change in the situation, it is reasonably certain that Europe will not require a great deal of our surplus grain in the coming year for the subsistence of her people. From all sides it is shown that her own crops are in excellent condition, better than they have been for years, and while they are never alone sufficient for the wants of the people, and some imports of grain are necessary to make up the deficiency, good harvests abroad must have an important influence upon the trade of this country."

PERSONAL POINTS.

—Postmaster-General Gresham has received the degree of LL. D. from both Wabash college and the Indiana state university.

—Raphael Semmes, of Alabama fame, is to have a monument. An English shipbuilder has started a subscription with a gift of $100.

—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher affords an illustration of the easy come easy go habit. He earns more than $30,000 a year and yet never has any money.

—They don't exactly say so, but both General Grant and Governor Foster talk as if they thought Dorsey should be reinstated as secretary of the national republican committee.

—A letter from a distinguished Rochester journalist says: "Lanigan, who came up to take charge of the Post-Express, has fallen quite flat. His trousers have been locked up two days."

—Dan Rice was discharged from Nathan's circus last week. The old clown had been on another long spree, and his daughter took him to Girard, Pa., where he has a handsome residence.

—Miss Ella Wheeler was given a reception, and a purse of $500 in gold, by the citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., on the occasion of the presentation to the public library of that city of her volume of "Poems of Passion."

—Jack Haverly's financial embarrassments were not alone caused by unfortunate mining speculations. It is said that his old passion for gaming recently came upon him, and that he has deposited large sums of money in faro banks around the country.

—Mrs. Langtry tells a reporter that being a professional woman she has two sides, one public and the other private. If that is true, Mrs. Langtry has got turned wrong side out since she came to this country, and, what is more, she doesn't seem to notice the difference, says the Boston Globe.

—George Hoadley, the coming democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, is a bright, snappy little man with a boyish face and a complexion which almost approaches the color of a ripe banana. He speaks with a quick, nervous, emphatic address which denotes nerve-power and self-reliance.

—It cost a juryman fifty dollars at Beatrice, Neb., the other day to suck refreshment through a rubber tube from a flask in his coat pocket during the progress of a murder trial on which he sat, and the Oil City Blizzard thinks that this act was regarded in Nebraska as contempt of court because he thus emptied the bottle himself, instead of politely offering the judge a pull.

—"I don't believe," said an old army officer in Washington the other evening, "that Senator Mahone has the faintest idea where his commission as brigadier in the confederate army is. I captured his wagon train one day. They brought me a wagon said to be his personal property, in the military sense of the word. In it were a peck and a half of corn and a grip-sack. The latter held a brand new confederate brigadier's uniform and Mahone's commission as a brigadier-general in the army of the confederate states of America. I gave the corn to my horse, the uniform to my little servant, whom it fitted to a nicety, and some day I'm going to give the commission to Mahone. It's in my desk now."

POLITICAL POINTERS.

EX-SENATOR THURMAN will be in the Ohio convention as a delegate, and is understood to be for Ward.

THE Ohio Democratic convention this week will be a lively body.

CHAIRMAN BARNUM has been out West giving Ben Butler's boom a lift.

THE National Anti-monopoly conference will be held in Chicago on July 4.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL DRUM pronounces Robert Lincoln the best secretary of war we have had since Jefferson Davis.

[illegible] may be a well-meaning man, the Boston Herald persists in ranking him as the first premium blunderer.

SENATOR BECK says that Arthur is the only Republican who can hope to be successful in the next presidential campaign.

THE Ohio prohibitionists are better organized and equipped this year than usual, and the republicans, in alarm, are trying to split them.

THE Boston Post wants the g. o. p. to nominate Hayes and Wheeler next year, so that the Democrats may get "another whack" at the 1876 ticket.

THE Philadelphia Press confidently predicts that Uncle John Sherman will perform his great act of taking the Ohio Democracy by the seat of its trousers and shaking it until its teeth rattle.

A PROMINENT politician from Indiana has informed a reporter of the Boston Herald that if the question of the Democratic nomination were left to the masses, and not to the wire-pullers, Butler would be the choice of a vast majority of the party.

THE Cincinnati Enquirer figures out 296 votes for General Ward, 261 for Hoadley, and 69 for Geddes on first ballot. But with Cleveland and Cincinnati both for Hoadley his chances are regarded as best.

ANYBODY who supposed that Mr. Blaine was ready to retire from politics at fifty-three years of age did not know the man. Will a duck "retire" from the water except to rest and feed? asks the Boston Herald.

REFERRING to Governor Foster's bar'l in the Ohio campaign, the New York World says: "Mr. Foster kept a country store and ran for congress occasionally. It was always noticed that the poor people in his district turned up about election time wearing new shoes. He hasn't forgotten how to distribute shoes where they will affect politics."

CLEVELAND PLAIN-DEALER: The star route thieves will soon commence another raid on the government. Dorsey, Brady and Bob Ingersoll and other big thieves have a grip on the low jurors about Washington, and hereafter robbery of the government will be the fashionable thing. There the jurors can be fixed.

PHILADELPHIA CHRONICLE-HERALD: Henry B. Payne, of Ohio, whom Tilden labored to make the presidential candidate of the democracy in 1880 when he found that all chances for himself had disappeared, is again beginning to make himself conspicuous in preparation for next year. It is to be feared, however, that Mr. Payne has been too close to the Standard oil company ever to reach the white-house.

Street Car Tribulations.

ST. LOUIS, June 20, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Through the medium of your valuable paper I wish to request the superintendent of the Bellefontaine railroad company to instruct his drivers to stop their cars when hailed at far crossings; especially call his attention to driver of car No. 41. When two or three persons are standing on the rear step of the car it is impossible for a man to jump on unless the car is stopped. Also, wish to inquire of him whether the drivers are instructed to dun a passenger for his fare before the car reaches Seventh street, going west. Is It Plagiarism?

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 19, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

This morning an editorial appears in the Globe-Democrat, with "Our Strangers" as its suggestive caption. Permit me to say that this writer doubtless listened to one of the able discourses spoken of on Sunday, and that the editorial in question is strong and conspicuous in that it fails utterly to touch one essential thought of the sermon. Truth is, that editorial in all its parts was mighty familiar to all of us young men who have listened to the echoes of the "Plymouth Pulpit." Mr. Beecher, in his public addresses on the emigration question, has told us annually for many years about that elephant digesting the big woods. Respectfully,

PETO.

A Delicate Point.

ST. LOUIS, June 20, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What ought a young lady do when a young man starts to take her home with a cigar in his mouth? I wanted to tell him that it was impolite, but I did not know exactly how to do so. Please advise me.

SWEET SIXTEEN.

[This is a very delicate business, particularly for a young lady, and it requires great presence of mind. But you might look fixedly at his cigar and ask him if the smoke-consuming ordinance had failed; or you might say you would wait until he had finished his cigar. If the worst comes to the worst, a young man who will attempt to escort a young lady through the streets with a cigar in his mouth should be made to take the snub direct.—ED. P.-D.]

Rough on the Vets.

ST. LOUIS, June 19, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was more than amused at reading in yesterday's DISPATCH that in Joliet, Ill., they have some sick cattle and the veterinary surgeons find themselves unable to cope with a new disease which is carrying off these cattle at an alarming rate. Now, sir, I would wish to know where a veterinary surgeon gets his knowledge. You might as well take a mule as one of these men to see a sick cow or steer. I will bet money none of those men can tell me which of the brute organs are most affected, I will say in murrain, which is a bad disease. The man who knows most about this disease is an old practical butcher; he is the best judge. They never think of sending in the old country for a veterinary surgeon; he may know something about a horse, but nothing about horned cattle; there would be more reason in sending for a doctor of medicine. Respectfully,

JAMES HARRISON.

Engagement Rings.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 18.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Will you please settle a dispute by stating in your paper which finger it is proper for a gentleman to wear an engagement ring on? also upon which finger should a lady wear hers?

A READER.

[In this country, as a rule which has but very few exceptions, gentlemen do not wear engagement rings. When worn, however, they should, as is the case with ladies, be placed upon the third finger of the left hand. But in Europe, when the announcement of an engagement is formally made to the friends of the engaged couple by their respective parents, engagement rings are exchanged by the lovers. These generally consist of what is known as the "alliance" ring, constructed so as to come apart, and upon the inner surface thus disclosed is engraved the fact of the engagement at the time of its occurrence, and, in due season, that of the marriage. At times the very sentimentally inclined have mottoes, vows of constancy, and other tender devices also engraved upon the ring. The engagement ring in this country is a much more expensive affair, and, if the custom of exchanging diamond rings comes into vogue in this country, it will tend to greatly enlarge the sales of the jewelers. It may interest the engaged, or those hoping or intending to become engaged, to know that the fashionable engagement ring at present is ornamented with sapphires and diamonds.—ED. P.-D.]

Rerdell's Plea.

From the New York World.

Something must be done at once for the relief of Mr. Rerdell. He pleaded guilty to a star route conspiracy to rob the government. The jury declares that he is a liar and exculpates his indicted colleagues. It is plain that Rerdell couldn't conspire alone, and he must be declared an innocent man, though he really believes himself guilty. Rerdell is undoubtedly insane.

The Military Spirit.

From the New York World.

Dorsey fought for the Union in the war. Brady was a general in the Union army. Babcock was a general, or bore the rank of one, and fought for the Union. Belknap, Macdonald and Joyce were all generals.

It was the "military" spirit which led Grant to appoint Brady and protect Babcock.

It is the "military" spirit which leads Sherman to indorse Brady and Dorsey. It was the same spirit that led Sherman to go on the witness-stand to give Babcock an excellent character.

Rutherford B. Hayes was a general. Garfield was a general. Both kept army chums in office who were notoriously corrupt.

What is excellent and desirable in military life is neither excellent nor desirable in civil life. Exalted ideas of official honesty and a horror of corruption do not grow by the camp-fire, on the march to the sea or during the sacking or burning of an enemy's town.

An Eccentric Peer.

London Cor. of the New York Tribune.

Much talk is caused by the demeanor of an eccentric peer who, albeit reported to be in financial difficulties, has just lancé a certain lady in very magnificent style. It is becoming very modish for married men of fashion to ruin themselves in maintaining extravagant auxiliary establishments. So far as I can see the object of their adoration need neither be young, handsome nor accomplished, so long as she fills some position in a theater, be the same in the ballet or chorus. She should also paint her eyes to excess, dye her hair and have a small talent for the sort of repartee called "chaff," to be quite the idol of the hour. A reputation for disinterestedness is considered a very precious property.

Danish Eggs.

From the Chicago Times.

The scarcity of eggs in this country has led a number of New York merchants to import eggs from foreign countries. Most of the importations came from Denmark, and if the business becomes general, Americans may come to understand to what Hamlet alluded when he exclaimed: "Something's rotten in the state of Denmark."

They Want Air.

From the Philadelphia Times.

One mistake which star-route people are making is in supposing that the diseased star-route atmosphere of Washington pervades the whole country. They will discover the awful character of this blunder when they get away for their summer vacation.

Will Utilize His Vigor.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Editor Watterson is in a frame of mind to believe that Mr. Tilden has a good deal of health connected with his possessions. Does anybody suppose that Mr. Tilden will allow all this genial robustness to run to waste by declining to be a candidate?

Important News From England.

London Cor. of the New York Tribune.

The reign of the all-round dog-collar has been a short one. Already it is over and the corners turn down again in the col cassé fashion. We have also given up the solitary central lighthouse-reflector shirt-stud and now wear three smaller ones rather close together.

Foster's Man.

From the Chicago Times.

Senator Sherman, Charley Foster, Butterworth, Keifer, and a host of others are to go into the Ohio campaign hot and heavy, but Stephen W. Dorsey, with his famous grip-sack and unostentatious methods, could accomplish more than all of them combined.

Another Banquet.

From the New York World.

A grand reconciliation and vindication banquet to Dorsey at Delmonico's would seem to be the proper thing now. If a little pressure were used Mr. Arthur could no doubt be induced to preside for the sake of old memories.

The Coming Great Men.

From the Washington Post.

Those who are anxious to see the future great men of the Republic can find many of them among the stupid fellows who are graduating at the tail-ends of their classes.

Polished Phrase.

From the Philadelphia News.

It is no longer polite to speak of a man as having been hanged. Say he went to the other world as an "assisted emigrant."

News from the Capital.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 19.—The trial of Governor Crittenden's coachman, Dave Glenn, after being adjourned three or four times, came off this evening. The darkey was defended by Hon. F. C. Farr, the governor's private secretary, and Arthur Hough, brother of Judge Hough of the supreme bench, and the city was represented by J. C. Fisher. For once the residents of Jefferson City appeared to take an interest in what was going on, and it is doubtful if murder case would have drawn such a crowd as thronged in Recorder Wagner's office to hear this case determined. Secretary of State McGrath was one of the important witnesses for the town and Warden Willis was a witness for the defense. The recorder no doubt made some able rulings, but as he speaks very poor English their full weight and meaning was not entirely understood.

After considerable argument by the counsel, the case was given to the jury, and the coachman was fined $5 and costs.

Gov. Crittenden went to Warrensburg this afternoon.

C. C. Morrow, clerk of the U. S. senate, is in this city.

Supreme Court Commissioner Philips and wife went to Kansas City to-day.

The river has been rapidly rising all day, and is now spread over the Callaway county bottoms to an alarming extent. If it does not commence to fall immediately, the residents of the bottom lands will be compelled to leave.

Closing Exercises.

The Glendale boys' school at Glendale, Mo. brought its year's work to a close to-day. The school building and grounds, formerly the property of L. S. Holden of this city, is located about eight miles west of the city on one of the loveliest spots in the state. Prof. E. A. Height, the principal, opened the school last November with twenty-five pupils, and the success of the enterprise is highly satisfactory to him as well as to his patrons. The exercises of to day consisted, during the early morning session, of examinations in Greek, Latin, German, and science, as well as in the common English branches. The pupils acquitted themselves very credibly and showed much of that firmness and confidence in self which is indicative of careful training. The examinations were followed by oratorical and musical exercises which were highly appreciated by the large gathering of friends and relatives of the students who were present. At twelve o'clock the pupils indulged in a military drill, which, by the way, is a part of the school work. They did themselves much credit by their rapid movements as well as graceful easy carriage. The day's entertainment was brought to a close by a banquet, after which the visitors and pupils retired to their homes, many of which are in different states.

The School Board.

The school board last evening adopted a report dismissing the charges against Engineer Sutton, and the committee of investigation was discharged. Mr. Bosley entered his protest. The report of the teachers' and salary joint committee recommending no change in the schedule for the ensuing year, was adopted. The kindergarten directors' schedule was adopted. Another effort to introduce a change in the drawing system was tabled. An appropriation of $35,000 for a new school building in the Nineteenth ward, corner of California and Wellington avenues, was approved. The report of the teachers' course of study and rules joint committee abolishing the use of the rod in schools after September 1, was adopted. The following salaries were increased: Bailiff, $2,000 to $2,200 per annum; superintendent's chief clerk, $1,500 to $1,600; secretary's clerk, same increase; supply clerk's assistant, $900 to $1,000. A recommendation that only one engineer be employed at the Polytechnic at $85 per month, aiming at the removal of Mr. Sutton, was referred back. The janitors' schedule remains unchanged, but they will be allowed $1 50 per annum for each room cleaned.

Lake region, local rains, partly cloudy, winds generally from south to west, stationary or slight rise in temperature; in west portions falling barometer, in east portions slight rise, followed by falling barometer. Lost at Sea.

PROVINCETOWN, MASS., June 20.—Mate Dunham and six or eight of the crew of the whaling schooner Ellen Rizpah, were lost on a whaling voyage. The captain and mate struck a whale at the same time, and the mate's line becoming fouled his boat was dragged under and never seen afterwards.

SINCE the Erie Railway commenced running its luxurious palace sleeping coaches from St. Louis to New York without change, by the Ohio and Mississippi Railway, not a miss in connection has has been made, and only one train has arrived in New York late, and that only fifteen minutes behind time.

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST—The twenty words for ten cents in our want columns.

MR. W. C. STEIGERS,

Of the POST-DISPATCH, will call upon parties who wish rates for advertising in this paper.

THE LOUNGER.

I CALLED upon Sergt. Weber in the new Custom-house building, where he is sojourning pending the completion of his future headquarters in the dome, and found him sitting in a large, square room in the second story, which proved a strange contrast to the snug quarters he has just left in the Insurance building. The sergeant explained that the instruments were still over at the old place and that, as now conducted, with the instruments in one place and the records in another, the work of making observations was considerably increased. He said that July 1 he would begin to fit up the new station, whose wind gauges will be 210 feet above the level of Olive street.

THE exposure afforded to the instruments above the top of the custom-house dome will be as good as that provided by any of the buildings where signal-service stations are situated. New York's station, on the top of the Equitable Insurance company building, is, perhaps, as good, but at Chicago the instruments are raised but very few feet above the roofs of houses surrounding the station.

SOME little time ago it was announced that the sergeant was about to retire from the service, but at present he is wavering between work for Uncle Sam and inducements offered by private individuals. With such an intimate acquaintance with meteorological affairs the sergeant ought to be able to see at least as far into the future as the Canadian, Vennor, and there is no doubt that if he were ever to go into the business of publishing guesses at the weather he would find an extensive patronage throughout the West.

PERSONALLY the sergeant is an agreeable and handsome fellow, getting on towards thirty, a blonde, single, devoted to the sex and susceptible, so that it is simply a wonder that he has thus far escaped matrimony. Speaking of his future the sergeant says: "Certain matters are as yet in abeyance," and some of his friends nod and wink as be says it with the clear implication that the gallant meteorologist's doom is fixed.

I WAS talking with an old river man yesterday, and he frankly acknowledged that thirty years' experience as a navigator of the Missouri and Mississippi and their principal tributaries had taught him that predictions of the height of a rise at a given point on the river, based upon the data of the height of water at points in the rivers above were not to be depended upon. "When I was twenty-five years younger," said the ancient mariner, "I used to indulge in prophecies of this kind, but it was all guess work. Take the predictions that the POST-DISPATCH man gathered up from river-men yesterday. There's a difference of three or four feet between the extreme views taken of the height to which the waters will rise. It's all guess work and vanity, and the best thing to do is to trust in Providence and hope for the best. That's what I'm doing, and these forecasts of five feet more water on the levee don't trouble me a bit. No modern man has the gift of prophecy and no one pretends he has that has any sense. Five feet more water! Shoo! Now, you mark my word! Yes, put it right down, if you will. The water will be falling by noon to-morrow. It won't rise more'n six inches above its present stage. Prophets, indeed!"

"I SEE that Capt. Mackenzie is hopelessly behind in the chess tournament now drawing to a close in England. The captain is a brilliant but, in tournaments, not a steadily successful player, the convivialities of the occasion frequently placing him at a disadvantage at crucial points of the contest. At the Vienna tournament the first prize was at his mercy at one stage of its progress, but the enjoyments which transpired between one Saturday night and the next Monday morning, enabled a very inferior player, who had carefully nursed his powers, to defeat the captain, and destroy his chance of winning first prize. He has many friends in St. Louis who would have been delighted to hear of his vanquishing the trans-Atlantic devotees of Caissa, and who are confident that in a match, which is the only reliable test, with any one of the European players he would come out ahead.

THE races call to mind the strange premonition which a patron of the pool-room had in a dream here six years ago. He dreamed that the winning ticket in the following day's combination would result from the selection of horses numbered 2-2-2, and acting on the supernatural suggestion he invested accordingly, although the horses which the pasteboard called for were of the pronouncedly "short" order. They all won the races, however, and the ticket gave him the contents of the pool box, minus the usual commission. The next day he repeated his venture and doubled his success, and, although the chances seemed enormously against him, he tried the fateful numbers once more and once more raked in the pot, his winnings from the three tickets, which cost him just $3, amounting to over $3,000. The story leaked out and there was a tremendous run on three-deuce combinations thereafter, but the charm was broken with the third event, and, after many failures, the backers of the dream-tip abandoned it. Even now are to be found purchasers of tickets who take a chance shot at the famous combination.

"THERE is a certain man in this city," said Joe Carr, the Exchange caller, "who never misses a game of base ball. You can always find him at the games, with his little score sheet before him, and who never played in a professional game in his life, but who, I think, was at one time a natural ball-player. He could play any position, and filled 'em all as well as you would want to see, but at second he was great. Yes, sir; he was a dandy. And bat! Well you ought to see him get on to a ball. I remember when the champion Bostons came here and played an amateur club—the Unions. I saw this party I'm talking about, whenever he came to the bat, hit the ball for a one and two bases, and that was the first time he had played in four years. He was just the build for a ball-tosser—stocky, but active as a cat. Who was it? Why, Charley Turner."

IT struck me, as I saw the muddy flood carrying monstrous logs and great trees, many of the latter green with living foliage, rapidly past the city, that the truant timber was well worth the saving at the prices for even the commonest kinds of lumber. A smart little steam launch, with an energetic crew of two, could, in a very few hours, pick up a very fair quality of salable timber and any amount of lumber that would make capital timber. Millions are not in it, but there's a good living for any who care to go into the business, with particularly rich rewards at the flood seasons.

Now that the Fourth of July is drawing near and the deadly toy pistol, with its poisonous fulminate, is awaiting its victims, would it not be well for the doctors to suggest some means by which the number of victims of patriotic lock-jaw can be lessened? Several thousand American lads died last year of tetanus resulting from wounds received on the national holiday, and, as the legislators have decided that the toy pistol must stay, even if the boys may go, the next best thing to do is to try and cure the wounded.

"I WENT to school with Dr. Pope when we were both very small boys," said Col. Andrew McKinley the other day, "at Huntsville, Alabama. We called him Cap from his initials, C. A. Pope. He was extremely shy and retiring, but was considered a bright boy."

"It is a perfect godsend," said a staid old citizen, "that the exposition is to occupy Missouri park, and it is a pity we haven't some such building to put up on Washington park. I passed through Missouri park the other night about eleven o'clock, when it happened to be warm and pleasant, and it was a perfect sight. Of all the hugging and kissing matches I ever saw that took the cake. I suppose Forest park will be used for the same purpose when we get rapid transit to it, but it is farther away from the city."

I SAW a rather amusing incident at the Ca[illegible] last week, and part of it happened while the chancellor was giving some of his most excruciating antics. A neatly-dressed young man was sitting beside a pretty young lady. The young man, under the influence of late hours, or a hitherto undiscovered soporificness in [illegible]mour's [illegible], fell asleep and was indulging in unmistakable nods. The young lady watched his side performance askance with not [illegible] disgust until she thought it had gone far enough, when she "accidentally on purpose" nudged her companion. Her move had the desired effect for awhile, but again the young man yielded to drowsy god, and again he was aroused. [illegible]

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 20, 1883.

AT the rate at which presidential aspirants are producing certificates of physical vigor, we shall probably have the nomination awarded as the prize in an athletic contest.

IT seems that the only objection to the Deceased Wife's Sister's bill as a cement of family ties in England is founded on the fact that the living wife's sister SARAH or SUSAN is too often at the bottom of all the family trouble.

WE note with approval the action of Mr. FREDERICK LAYTON, of Milwaukee, who proposes to give his city a $50,000 art hall without conditions. This is a great improvement on the frequent method of making gifts and loading them down with conditions.

Is the old man losing his grip? Right on the heels of the announcement that BUTLER had signed the appropriation bill for the Tewksbury alms-house comes the news that he has accepted the invitation of the president and fellows of Harvard college to be present at the commencement exercises.

DID we hear Mr. STONE say that he had heard a man say that the city would get $800,000 a year from the new license? We should like to have it, but we are afraid that that $800,000 is like the Spanish fleet so beautifully described by the poet who said:

"The Spanish fleet thou cans't not see because
It is not yet in sight."

THERE was a $2,000 bail bond forfeited in the county yesterday. As the bond was given for Mr. BEAUCLEIGH, who can easily make that amount in a month by the exercise of his industry, it is probable that collateral for that amount was put up, but if ever the money is paid into court we shall be glad to mention it.

THE nomination of a prohibition ticket makes the Ohio republicans feel how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a thankless child. The prohibitionists are indeed shockingly ungrateful, and according to the republican papers they are making fools of themselves. It seems to be regretted in some quarters that there is no law to make them vote the republican ticket.

WE like to sit at the feet of eastern journalism, so to speak, and learn how to do it. Here is the New York Truth, edited by the gifted and brilliant OAKEY HALL, which heads an editorial article with the wild, weird head-line, "A disaster parallel to the bridge one." The western mind is lost in admiration of the intricate convolutions of the eastern brain which can speak of the Sunderland disaster as "a disaster parallel to the bridge one."

OUR admiration for the chivalrous Louisiana theological student who murdered the seducer of his betrothed is somewhat diminished by the news that the young lady was not seduced, and was not his betrothed. These trifling errors in the career of the Rev. BEN. T. JENKINS, jr., of Louisiana, will probably be overlooked by an appreciative community, and he will live to expound the gospel to admiring congregations.

A VERY few days of fine weather suffice to make St. Louis a sporting center, but it is to be regretted that the weather clerk cannot make arrangements to give us our fine weather on Saturdays and Sundays. Thus far this season the hundreds of thousands who get their outing between Saturday noon and Monday morning have not been generously treated by the weather clerk.

THE military and naval forces of France have covered themselves with as much distinction as can be gained by bombarding a defenceless city and capturing a mud fort, but the brutal disregard of international rights shown by France in Madagascar, as well as in Tunis and Tonquin, and whereever bullying was safe, will not help the French republic among Americans, who understand that one of the duties of a free country is to respect the freedom of others.

WHEN BRADY was first accused we were told that his suddenly acquired fortune was the result of lucky speculation in Bell telephone stocks. Since his acquittal it is announced that he has recently made another million or so in Rio Grande stock, while poor DORSEY has nothing left but a pitiful half million tied up in a cattle ranch out west. Neither one of them ever had anything till he became a political boss, and the millions the government has saved since they were exposed render all further explanations of their wealth superfluous.

MR. TILDEN should put an end to this contradictory testimony about his robustitude. While WATTERSON describes him as HAMLET described his martial father, other gentlemen insist that "the old man cannot lift either hand to his mouth, both arms being paralyzed so that he has to be fed with a spoon, and so helpless that he has to be supported by two attendants." Mr. TILDEN might easily settle this dispute by coming out of his hermit-like seclusion and exhibiting himself on foot or on horseback where the general public can see him.

CINCINNATI has been attidudinizing before the world as the center of culture, and a bored and weary world has preferred to accept all of its claims, no matter how bogus and fraudulent they were, rather than discuss the question. But occasionally some little inconsistency between the claims set forth and the reality will crop out which Cincinnati has a right hard time explaining away. Here, for instance, is the case of Mr. KELLY, for many years a city father of Cincinnati. Instead of passing his leisure hours in visiting the private art treasures of Walnut Hills or admiring the chaste sculpture of the PROBASCO fountain, Mr. KELLY prefers to tilt a chair up against the wall of the engine-house and talk base ball with the boys. This has its poetic side, but there is no poetry in Mr. KELLY's conduct when he pulls out his revolver and resents the familiarities of one of the boys by putting a bullet as near his heart as he can get it. This is what Mr. KELLY has done, however, and so far as we can learn Mr. KELLY is, in every sense of the word, a representative citizen and favorite son of Cincinnati.

WOMEN AT THE BAR.

The admission of a lady to the bar of Philadelphia is an innovation which should spread with a more rapid growth, as we do not know of any profession which stands more in need of the civilizing and restraining influence of woman's presence than the profession and practice of the law. It really looks as if there was an epidemic of bad temper and bad manners among those who ought to bring into the court-house a sentiment of personal dignity and propriety. Personal altercations are frequent (the city of St. Louis has furnished its fair share of them); exchanges of personalities are frequently followed up by altercations out of court; and it is the exception to hear of a closely-contested or long-continued trial in which the legal issues are not laid aside at the bidding of personal anger.

This is an injury to every interest involved, and it sometimes injures the innocent client in a most striking manner. Our specials from New York reported the sensational incident in the trial of JOHN DEVOY, for libel, in which Mr. DEVOY's mistaken counsel undertook to insult the complainant, BELMONT, by a most degrading insinuation. There can be no doubt that this superfluous piece of blackguardism helped Mr. DEVOY to get a sentence of sixty days' imprisonment which he might have otherwise avoided.

It is true that the lady lawyers who have thus far appeared on the scene have caught the spirit of their legal brothers and have helped to make things right lively for the judges and spectators at various intervals, but this, we think, has been because they were so few that their position has been a most trying one. The more general admission of women to the practice of the law would undoubtedly be a good thing.

A FISH STORY.

"H. W." will have to hie him back to Greystone and issue a revised and improved TILDEN health bulletin. His last is utterly eclipsed by a later one forwarded by "J. H. W." to the Cincinnati Enquirer from the home of Mr. HENDRICKS. It appears that when the WATTERSON manifesto reached Indianapolis, Mr. HENDRICKS roused his Boswell out of bed at four o'clock in the morning, and literally wore him out in a weary day-long tramp of many miles, through bush and through brake, up and down the banks of White river, casting for bass and croppie. Mr. HENDRICKS waded in and caught two buckets of minnows for bait, which exposed his toes to the inspection of his companion, who declares there was not even a scar upon any one of them. The only conversation of a political nature between the two that could be disclosed without a breach of propriety, is thus reported verbatim:

I finally said:

"Governor, don't you think we have had enough of this?"

He smiled, and in his dry, half-pitying, half-sarcastic way said:

"If you are tired you can lay down on the bank and I will fish for you."

The account closes with this pathetic finale:

How I followed the governor through the weary thirteen miles along the curves of the river to this city I hardly know. It was dark when I staggered into my home so exhausted that my family were alarmed, and as I could not explain why I was in that condition, my wife telephoned to know if the governor had returned, saying that I seemed to be in a dangerous condition. Late as it was the governor walked at once to my house, a mile distant, to see that I had all needed attention. This mark of interested friendship shows his generous disposition. To-day I am just able to dictate this dispatch from my bed. I hear that the governor is arguing an important case in one of the courts.

After this presentation of the "old ticket" in the likeness of a kangaroo, with most of its strength in its hind legs, any day may bring us exciting news from Greystone. The exigencies of the situation seem to call for a wedding, or at least something in the nature of a desperate flying leap over a garden wall, with shot-gun accompaniments and subsequent divorce proceedings.

CHARLES II. never said a foolish thing and never did a wise one. The converse of this seems applicable to Gen. SHERMAN. Generally correct and wise in his conduct, he delights in wild talk for which nobody thinks of holding him seriously responsible. Here is his latest cranky outburst:

Dorsey was a splendid senator and Gen. Brady a hard-working, active man. Both of them seemed to me to be honorable men. What they did in the matter of the mail routes for which they have been tried was in the line of promoting the population and development of the West.

In view of the fact that the stoppage of star-route stealings to the amount of a million a year has neither curtailed the mail facilities nor checked the development of the West, Gen. SHERMAN's tribute to BRADY and DORSEY as public benefactors is one that would disgrace any distinguished soldier except himself. He is a privileged character, especially as to his mouth, and whether he is kissing all the women in sight or talking like GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN, it is generally understood that he does not mean it.

THE people of St. Louis can hardly feel flattered on reading in the Globe-Democrat of this morning the following startling headlines:

A CRIMINAL COMMUNITY.

ST. LOUIS WELL REPRESENTED IN THE POPULATION OF JOLIET PRISON.

Does the Globe-Democrat mean to intimate that St. Louis is a criminal community because it is so well represented in the Illinois state prison; or, if not, what does it mean?

THE NEW YORK PRESS.

The World to-day says: "Governor Butler knows how to return good for evil. He has accepted an invitation to attend the commencement exercises at Harvard university, and he will be there in all his glory. When the overseers oversee Benjamin sitting in all his effulgence on the right hand of the faculty, they will be likely to experience feelings similar to those which filled the bosom of the narrow-minded Haman when he saw Mordecai perched on the king's gate."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "We hear that three cadets of the graduating class of the naval academy who finished the four year's course last Saturday, have been dropped for color-blindness. It is remarkable that this defect was not discovered until the government had laid out several thousands of dollars on their education. No doubt it is intended that some shall receive an education who may not enter the service. But it is hardly intended to maintain those at the academy who are physically disqualified for the navy."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "Whether Judge Hoadley, Judge Geddes, Judge Thurman or General Ward shall receive the honor of a nomination from the Ohio democratic convention, is a matter of ephemeral interest, not likely to outlast the two brief years of the official term; but if the sages assembled at Columbus put in their platform the tariff plank foreshadowed in the dispatches, demanding 'a tariff for revenue, so adjusted as to afford equal protection to American industry, without creating monopolies,' and accompany it with a lucid explanation of how this can be done, they may go home with the conviction that they have done a work for all time."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "The collapse of a powerful clique of speculators, who have been trying to make a 'corner' in lard, is hailed as a public benefit. If it is so, why is not the formation of such a 'pool' held to be contrary to the public welfare? Why are not speculators, if they seek to fix unnaturally high prices upon any of the articles of prime necessity, held to be public enemies?"

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "Unless there occurs a very marked change in the situation, it is reasonably certain that Europe will not require a great deal of our surplus grain in the coming year for the subsistence of her people. From all sides it is shown that her own crops are in excellent condition, better than they have been for years, and while they are never alone sufficient for the wants of the people, and some imports of grain are necessary to make up the deficiency, good harvests abroad must have an important influence upon the trade of this country."

PERSONAL POINTS.

—Postmaster-General Gresham has received the degree of LL. D. from both Wabash college and the Indiana state university.

—Raphael Semmes, of Alabama fame, is to have a monument. An English shipbuilder has started a subscription with a gift of $100.

—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher affords an illustration of the easy come easy go habit. He earns more than $30,000 a year and yet never has any money.

—They don't exactly say so, but both General Grant and Governor Foster talk as if they thought Dorsey should be reinstated as secretary of the national republican committee.

—A letter from a distinguished Rochester journalist says: "Lanigan, who came up to take charge of the Post-Express, has fallen quite flat. His trousers have been locked up two days."

—Dan Rice was discharged from Nathan's circus last week. The old clown had been on another long spree, and his daughter took him to Girard, Pa., where he has a handsome residence.

—Miss Ella Wheeler was given a reception, and a purse of $500 in gold, by the citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., on the occasion of the presentation to the public library of that city of her volume of "Poems of Passion."

—Jack Haverly's financial embarrassments were not alone caused by unfortunate mining speculations. It is said that his old passion for gaming recently came upon him, and that he has deposited large sums of money in faro banks around the country.

—Mrs. Langtry tells a reporter that being a professional woman she has two sides, one public and the other private. If that is true, Mrs. Langtry has got turned wrong side out since she came to this country, and, what is more, she doesn't seem to notice the difference, says the Boston Globe.

—George Hoadley, the coming democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, is a bright, snappy little man with a boyish face and a complexion which almost approaches the color of a ripe banana. He speaks with a quick, nervous, emphatic address which denotes nerve-power and self-reliance.

—It cost a juryman fifty dollars at Beatrice, Neb., the other day to suck refreshment through a rubber tube from a flask in his coat pocket during the progress of a murder trial on which he sat, and the Oil City Blizzard thinks that this act was regarded in Nebraska as contempt of court because he thus emptied the bottle himself, instead of politely offering the judge a pull.

—"I don't believe," said an old army officer in Washington the other evening, "that Senator Mahone has the faintest idea where his commission as brigadier in the confederate army is. I captured his wagon train one day. They brought me a wagon said to be his personal property, in the military sense of the word. In it were a peck and a half of corn and a grip-sack. The latter held a brand new confederate brigadier's uniform and Mahone's commission as a brigadier-general in the army of the confederate states of America. I gave the corn to my horse, the uniform to my little servant, whom it fitted to a nicety, and some day I'm going to give the commission to Mahone. It's in my desk now."

Street Car Tribulations.

ST. LOUIS, June 20, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Through the medium of your valuable paper I wish to request the superintendent of the Bellefontaine railroad company to instruct his drivers to stop their cars when hailed at far crossings; especially call his attention to driver of car No. 41. When two or three persons are standing on the rear step of the car it is impossible for a man to jump on unless the car is stopped. Also, wish to inquire of him whether the drivers are instructed to dun a passenger for his fare before the car reaches Seventh street, going west. Would like to have the gentleman addressed reply to this. Respectfully, E. BUNTLEY.

Is It Plagiarism?

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 19, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

This morning an editorial appears in the Globe-Democrat, with "Our Strangers" as its suggestive caption. Permit me to say that this writer doubtess listened to one of the able discourses spoken of on Sunday, and that the editorial in question is strong and conspicuous in that it fails utterly to touch one essential thought of the sermon.

Truth is, that editorial in all its parts was mighty familiar to all of us young men who have listened to the echoes of the "Plymouth Pulpit." Mr. Beecher, in his public addresses on the emigration question, has told us annually for many years about that elephant digesting the big woods. Respectfully, PETO.

A Delicate Point.

ST. LOUIS, June 20, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What ought a young lady do when a young man starts to take her home with a cigar in his mouth? I wanted to tell him that it was impolite, but I did not know exactly how to do so. Please advise me. SWEET SIXTEEN.

[This is a very delicate business, particularly for a young lady, and it requires great presence of mind. But you might look fixedly at his cigar and ask him if the smoke-consuming ordinance had failed; or you might say you would wait until he had finished his cigar. If the worst comes to the worst, a young man who will attempt to escort a young lady through the streets with a cigar in his mouth should be made to take the snub direct.—ED. P.-D.]

Rough on the Vets.

ST. LOUIS, June 19, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I was more than amused at reading in yesterday's DISPATCH that in Joliet, Ill., they have some sick cattle and the veterinary surgeons find themselves unable to cope with a new disease which is carrying off these cattle at an alarming rate. Now, sir, I would wish to know where a veterinary surgeon gets his knowledge. You might as well take a mule as one of these men to see a sick cow or steer. I will bet money none of those men can tell me which of the brute organs are most affected, I will say in murrain, which is a bad disease. The man who knows most about this disease is an old practical butcher; he is the best judge. They never think of sending in the old country for a veterinary surgeon; he may know something about a horse, but nothing about horned cattle; there would be more reason in sending for a doctor of medicine. Respectfully, JAMES HARRISON.

Engagement Rings.

ST. LOUIS, MO., June 18.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Will you please settle a dispute by stating in your paper which finger it is proper for a gentleman to wear an engagement ring on? also upon which finger should a lady wear hers? A READER.

[In this country, as a rule which has but very few exceptions, gentlemen do not wear engagement rings. When worn, however, they should, as is the case with ladies, be placed upon the third finger of the left hand. But in Europe, when the announcement of an engagement is formally made to the friends of the engaged couple by their respective parents, engagement rings are exchanged by the lovers. These generally consist of what is known as the "alliance" ring, constructed so as to come apart, and upon the inner surface thus disclosed is engraved the fact of the engagement at the time of its occurrence, and, in due season, that of the marriage. At times the very sentimentally inclined have mottoes, vows of constancy, and other tender devices also engraved upon the ring. The engagement ring in this country is a much more expensive affair, and, if the custom of exchanging diamond rings comes into vogue in this country, it will tend to greatly enlarge the sales of the jewelers. It may interest the engaged, or those hoping or intending to become engaged, to know that the fashionable engagement ring at present is ornamented with sapphires and diamonds.—ED. P.-D.]

Rerdell's Plea.

From the New York World.

Something must be done at once for the relief of Mr. Rerdell. He pleaded guilty to a star-route conspiracy to rob the government. The jury declares that he is a liar and exculpates his indicted colleagues. It is plain that Rerdell couldn't conspire alone, and he must be declared an innocent man, though he really believes himself guilty. Rerdell is undoubtedly insane.

The Military Spirit.

From the New York World.

Dorsey fought for the Union in the war. Brady was a general in the Union army. Babcock was a general, or bore the rank of one, and fought for the Union. Belknap, Macdonald and Joyce were all generals.

It was the "military" spirit which led Grant to appoint Brady and protect Babcock.

It is the "military" spirit which leads Sherman to indorse Brady and Dorsey. It was the same spirit that led Sherman to go on the witness-stand to give Babcock an excellent character.

Rutherford B. Hayes was a general. Garfield was a general. Both kept army chums in office who were notoriously corrupt.

What is excellent and desirable in military life is neither excellent nor desirable in civil life. Exalted ideas of official honesty and a horror of corruption do not grow by the camp-fire, on the march to the sea or during the sacking or burning of an enemy's town.

An Eccentric Peer.

London Cor. of the New York Tribune.

Much talk is caused by the demeanor of an eccentric peer who, albeit reported to be in financial difficulties, has just lancé a certain lady in very magnificent style. It is becoming very modish for married men of fashion to ruin themselves in maintaining extravagant auxiliary establishments. So far as I can see the object of their adoration need neither be young, handsome nor accomplished, so long as she fills some position in a theater, be the same in the ballet or chorus. She should also paint her eyes to excess, dye her hair and have a small talent for the sort of repartee called "chaff," to be quite the idol of the hour. A reputation for disinterestedness is considered a very precious property.

Danish Eggs.

From the Chicago Times.

The scarcity of eggs in this country has led a number of New York merchants to import eggs from foreign countries. Most of the importations came from Denmark, and if the business becomes general, Americans may come to understand to what Hamlet alluded when he exclaimed: "Something's rotten in the state of Denmark."

They Want Air.

From the Philadelphia Times.

One mistake which star-route people are making is in supposing that the diseased star-route atmosphere of Washington pervades the whole country. They will discover the awful character of this blunder when they get away for their summer vacation.

Will Utilize His Vigor.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Important News From England.

London Cor. of the New York Tribune.

The reign of the all-round dog-collar has been a short one. Already it is over and the corners turn down again in the col cassé fashion. We have also given up the solitary central lighthouse-reflector shirt-stud and now wear three smaller ones rather close together.

Foster's Man.

From the Chicago Times.

Senator Sherman, Charley Foster, Butterworth, Keifer, and a host of others are to go into the Ohio campaign hot and heavy, but Stephen W. Dorsey, with his famous grip-sack and unostentatious methods, could accomplish more than all of them combined.

Another Banquet.

From the New York World.

A grand reconciliation and vindication banquet to Dorsey at Delmonico's would seem to be the proper thing now. If a little pressure were used Mr. Arthur could no doubt be induced to preside for the sake of old memories.

The Coming Great Men.

From the Washington Post.

Those who are anxious to see the future great men of the Republic can find many of them among the stupid fellows who are graduating at the tail-ends of their classes.

Polished Phrase.

From the Philadelphia News.

News from the Capital.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 19.—The trial of Governor Crittenden's coachman, Dave Glenn, after being adjourned three or four times, came off this evening. The darkey was defended by Hon. F. C. Farr, the governor's private secretary, and Arthur Hough, brother of Judge Hough of the supreme bench, and the city was represented by J. C. Fisher. For once the residents of Jefferson City appeared to take an interest in what was going on, and it is doubtful if murder case would have drawn such a crowd as thronged in Recorder Wagner's office to hear this case determined. Secretary of State McGrath was one of the important witnesses for the town and Warden Willis was a witness for the defense. The recorder no doubt made some able rulings, but as he speaks very poor English their full weight and meaning was not entirely understood.

After considerable argument by the counsel, the case was given to the jury, and the coachman was fined $5 and costs.

Gov. Crittenden went to Warrensburg this afternoon.

C. C. Morrow, clerk of the U. S. senate, is in this city.

Supreme Court Commissioner Philips and wife went to Kansas City to-day.

The river has been rapidly rising all day, and is now spread over the Callaway county bottoms to an alarming extent. If it does not commence to fall immediately, the residents of the bottom lands will be compelled to leave.

Closing Exercises.

The Glendale boys' school at Glendale, Mo. brought its year's work to a close to-day. The school building and grounds, formerly the property of L. S. Holden of this city, is located about eight miles west of the city on one of the loveliest spots in the state. Prof. E. A. Height, the principal, opened the school last November with twenty-five pupils, and the success of the enterprise is highly satisfactory to him as well as to his patrons. The exercises of to day consisted, during the early morning session, of examinations in Greek, Latin, German, and science, as well as in the common English branches. The pupils acquitted themselves very credibly and showed much of that firmness and confidence in self which is indicative of careful training. The examinations were followed by oratorical and musical exercises which were highly appreciated by the large gathering of friends and relatives of the students who were present. At twelve o'clock the pupils indulged in a military drill, which, by the way, is a part of the school work. They did themselves much credit by their rapid movements as well as graceful easy carriage. The day's entertainment was brought to a close by a banquet, after which the visitors and pupils retired to their homes, many of which are in different states.

The School Board.

The school board last evening adopted a report dismissing the charges against Engineer Sutton, and the committee of investigation was discharged. Mr. Bosley entered his protest. The report of the teachers' and salary joint committee recommending no change in the schedule for the ensuing year, was adopted. The kindergarten directors' schedule was adopted. Another effort to introduce a change in the drawing system was tabled. An appropriation of $35,000 for a new school building in the Nineteenth ward, corner of California and Wellington avenues, was approved. The report of the teachers' course of study and rules joint committee abolishing the use of the rod in schools after September 1, was adopted. The following salaries were increased: Bailiff, $2,000 to $2,200 per annum; superintendent's chief clerk, $1,500 to $1,600; secretary's clerk, same increase; supply clerk's assistant, $900 to $1,000. A recommendation that only one engineer be employed at the Polytechnic at $85 per month, aiming at the removal of Mr. Sutton, was referred back. The janitors' schedule remains unchanged, but they will be allowed $1 50 per annum for each room cleaned.

Lost at Sea.

PROVINCETOWN, MASS., June 20.—Mate Dunham and six or eight of the crew of the whaling schooner Ellen Rizpah, were lost on a whaling voyage. The captain and mate struck a whale at the same time, and the mate's line becoming fouled his boat was dragged under and never seen afterwards.

THE CHEAPEST AND BEST—The twenty words for ten cents in our want columns.

MR. W. C. STEIGERS,

Of the POST-DISPATCH, will call upon parties who wish rates for advertising in this paper.

THE LOUNGER.

I CALLED upon Sergt. Weber in the new Custom-house building, where he is sojourning pending the completion of his future headquarters in the dome, and found him sitting in a large, square room in the second story, which proved a strange contrast to the snug quarters he has just left in the Insurance building. The sergeant explained that the instruments were still over at the old place and that, as now conducted, with the instruments in one place and the records in another, the work of making observations was considerably increased. He said that July 1 he would begin to fit up the new station, whose wind gauges will be 210 feet above the level of Olive street.

THE exposure afforded to the instruments above the top of the custom-house dome will be as good as that provided by any of the buildings where signal-service stations are situated. New York's station, on the top of the Equitable Insurance company building, is, perhaps, as good, but at Chicago the instruments are raised but very few feet above the roofs of houses surrounding the station.

SOME little time ago it was announced that the sergeant was about to retire from the service, but at present he is wavering between work for Uncle Sam and inducements offered by private individuals. With such an intimate acquaintance with meteorological affairs the sergeant ought to be able to see at least as far into the future as the Canadian, Vennor, and there is no doubt that if he were ever to go into the business of publishing guesses at the weather he would find an extensive patronage throughout the West.

PERSONALLY the sergeant is an agreeable and handsome fellow, getting on towards thirty, a blonde, single, devoted to the sex and susceptible, so that it is simply a wonder that he has thus far escaped matrimony. Speaking of his future the sergeant says: "Certain matters are as yet in abeyance," and some of his friends nod and wink as he says it with the clear implication that the gallant meteorologist's doom is fixed.

I WAS talking with an old river man yesterday, and he frankly acknowledged that thirty years' experience as a navigator of the Missouri and Mississippi and their principal tributaries had taught him that predictions of the height of a rise at a given point on the river, based upon the data of the height of water at points in the rivers above were not to be depended upon. "When I was twenty-five years younger," said the ancient mariner, "I used to indulge in prophecies of this kind, but it was all guess work. Take the predictions that the POST-DISPATCH man gathered up from river-men yesterday. There's a difference of three or four feet between the extreme views taken of the height to which the waters will rise. It's all guess work and vanity, and the best thing to do is to trust in Providence and hope for the best. That's what I'm doing, and these forecasts of five feet more water on the levee don't trouble me a bit. No modern man has the gift of prophecy and no one pretends he has that has any sense. Five feet more water! Sho! Now, you mark my word! Yes, put it right down, if you will. The water will be falling by noon to-morrow. It won't rise more'n six inches above its present stage. Prophets, indeed!"

"I SEE that Capt. Mackenzie is hopelessly behind in the chess tournament now drawing to a close in England. The captain is a brilliant but, in tournaments, not a steadily successful player, the convivialities of the occasion frequently placing him at a disadvantage at crucial points of the contest. At the Vienna tournament the first prize was at his mercy at one stage of its progress, but the enjoyments which transpired between one Saturday night and the next Monday morning, enabled a very inferior player, who had carefully nursed his powers, to defeat the captain, and destroy his chance of winning first prize. He has many friends in St. Louis who would have been delighted to hear of his vanquishing the trans-Atlantic devotees of Caissa, and who are confident that in a match, which is the only reliable test, with any one of the European players he would come out ahead.

THE races call to mind the strange premonition which a patron of the pool-room had in a dream here six years ago. He dreamed that the winning ticket in the following day's combination would result from the selection of horses numbered 2-2-2, and acting on the supernatural suggestion he invested accordingly, although the horses which the pasteboard called for were of the pronouncedly "short" order. They all won the races, however, and the ticket gave him the contents of the pool box, minus the usual commission. The next day he repeated his venture and doubled his success, and, although the chances seemed enormously against him, he tried the fateful numbers once more and once more raked in the pot, his winnings from the three tickets, which cost him just $3, amounting to over $3,000. The story leaked out and there was a tremendous run on three-deuce combinations thereafter, but the charm was broken with the third event, and, after many failures, the backers of the dream-tip abandoned it. Even now are to be found purchasers of tickets who take a chance snot at the famous combination.

"THERE is a certain man in this city," said Joe Carr, the Exchange caller, "who never misses a game of base ball. You can always find him at the games, with his little score sheet before him, and who never played in a professional game in his life, but who, I think, was at one time a natural ball-player. He could play any position, and filled 'em all as well as you would want to see, but at second he was great. Yes, sir; he was a dandy. And bat! Well you ought to see him get on to a ball. I remember when the champion Bostons came here and played an amateur club—the Unions. I saw this party I'm talking about, whenever he came to the bat, hit the ball for a one and two bases, and that was the first time he had played in four years. He was just the build for a ball-tosser—stocky, but active as a cat. Who was it? Why, Charley Turner."

IT struck me, as I saw the muddy flood carrying monstrous logs and great trees, many of the latter green with living foliage, rapidly past the city, that the truant timber was well worth the saving at the prices for even the commonest kinds of lumber. A smart little steam launch, with an energetic crew of two, could, in a very few hours, pick up a very fair quality of salable timber and any amount of lumber that would make capital timber. Millions are not in it, but there's a good living for any who care to go into the business, with particularly rich rewards at the flood seasons.

Now that the Fourth of July is drawing near and the deadly toy pistol, with its poisonous fulminate, is awaiting its victims, would it not be well for the doctors to suggest some means by which the number of victims of patriotic lock-jaw can be lessened? Several thousand American lads died last year of tetanus resulting from wounds received on the national holiday, and, as the legislators have decided that the toy pistol must stay, even if the boys may go, the next best thing to do is to try and cure the wounded.

"It is a perfect godsend," said a staid old citizen, "that the exposition is to occupy Missouri park, and it is a pity we haven't some such building to put up on Washington park. I passed through Missouri park the other night about eleven o'clock, when it happened to be warm and pleasant, and it was a perfect sight. Of all the hugging and kissing matches I ever saw that took the cake. I suppose Forest park will be used for the same purpose when we get rapid transit to it, but it is farther away from the city."

Prominent Physicians Discuss the Fatal Properties of Frozen Drinks.

Diseases that Dwell in the Cooler—The Human System at the Mercy of the Chilling Draught—All the Organs may Become Involved—The Teeth Threatened—Some Startling Revelations.

People who are fond of ice water, and particularly those who make aqueducts of themselves in this warm weather, will find a chill come over them when they read this article, while the young man whose girl can see an ice-cream saloon forty blocks off and has an insatiate appetite for the vanilla flavored brand of frozen pudding, may cut the column out of the paper, paste it in his hat, and read it to the yearning maiden every time she allows her thoughts to wander fondly in the direction of soda fountains or the little white tables in the back parlor of the confectionery shop. The POST-DISPATCH reporter who writes the article will drink ice water no more, and his advice to the intelligent citizen of thirsty proclivities is to eschew the aqueous trimmings to a fifteen-cent drink unless the liquid has been boiled on a gas-stove and raised to the proper temperature of 40° Fahrenheit. The reporter's affection for the water-cooler was suddenly distributed in space by the statement of a well-known physician to the effect that many of the racking tortures caused by chronic disease and nervous derangement could be traced directly to the reckless use of ice water. The standing of the physician, who has an extensive and fashionable practice in the west end, made his declaration worthy of attention and gave it weight and importance. He attributed much of the unhealthiness of the summer to this cause, and was in favor of an instant and wholesale crusade against ice-cooled drinking water.

WITH THIS STARTLING REVELATION

before him, the reporter undertook an investigation of the subject, and soon found himself seated in the office of a Fifth street doctor, to whom he thus addressed himself:

"Will you be kind enough, doctor, to tell me, briefly, what you know by experience of the evil effects of ice water as used by the people of this city?"

"It is damaging to the health at all times," replied the physician, "and more especially when it is taken in quantities by people who never take into consideration the temperature of the body at the time. It shocks the whole system, and the organism of the human frame suffers severely from such shocks, and if continued, disease, and, finally, death will result. The heart suffers, the liver suffers, and the brain suffers. Cold draughts of water, or of any other liquid interferes with the operations of the nutritive system and a complication of diseases is often the result. Water at a temperature above 40, is not hurtful when taken in small quantities, but too many never stop to consider quantity and generally drink a gobletful at a time and that many times a day. When very cold, water tends to produce thirst and the result is, many take so much of it on extremely warm days that the stomach becomes overburdened and some of the organs are arrested sometimes in the performance of their functions by mere mechanical force. The digestion is impeded in two ways by cold liquids or ices. The temperature is lowered in the stomach to a point below that at which digestion is carried on, and the acids of that organ are sometimes diluted to such an extent that they become inert. On the whole, the health of the city would be vastly improved if not a pound of ice was sold for the purpose of cooling water for drinking purposes."

Thanking the medical man for the information so cheerfully given, the reporter called upon on Fourth street, to whom he repeated the question as to the evil effects of ice water. The doctor replied:

"On general principles, ice water is hurtful to the nutritive system."

"In what particular way does it disturb the operations of that system?" said the scribe.

"Its chilling effect stops the flow of the gastric juice which is produced by the glands of the mucous membrane of the stomach. This fluid is the active agent in digestion. Its flow is stopped altogether sometimes, and very often retarded by a contraction of the tissues of the stomach, which is produced by cold liquids of any kind. The shock is great sometimes, and for the moment digestion is suspended and is tardily resumed again. A repetition of this temporary suspension, occurring almost daily, and sometimes oftener, will naturally have a natural tendency to impair, and even destroy the action of the organs; disease, of course, is the result."

"What do you think of our river water at its natural temperature?"

"In summer it is too warm for drinking purposes and it ought to be cooled, but this way people have of throwing lumps of ice into it and reducing its temperature almost to the freezing point and then drinking it without any regard for the consequences is little short of insanity. A very large per cent of the cases of dyspepsia that present themselves can be traced directly to the use of ice-cold drinks in some form."

"By the way, there are other evils arising from the use of ice in this and most other cities. Much of it, I believe, is taken from ponds and dikes and sloughs, where the water is stagnant and impure. Such ice contains dangerous elements in the form of poisons. Diseases of a febrile nature are sometimes caused by the use of it."

"Then, doctor, I must understand you that freezing does not drive out the impurities?"

"Exactly so; they are frozen in the water and remain there. Neither are their poisonous elements at all modified by the extreme cold.

THE ANIMALCULA,

which are found so abundant in all water which is exposed to the action of the atmosphere, may be killed by the freezing; that is, the living animals may die, but the germs are left and will spring into life as soon as the proper temperature is once again reached. People should know something of the character of the ice they are using before placing it in the cooler."

Dr. Jaminet of Washington avenue was next interviewed.

"Doctor, do you consider ice water detrimental to health?" the reporter asked.

"I do, certainly; it is very injurious."

"How does it act upon the human system so as to produce the evil effects?"

"When the blood is heated by over exertion, or even moderate exertion, on a warm day, a glass of ice-cold water taken into the system at once will cause quite a shock by cooling the parts with which it comes in contact too quickly. Under certain conditions it might produce certain death, as it often does."

"How?"

"By causing an entire suspension of the action of some of the organs."

"What organs?"

"The heart sometimes, at others the nervous system, and the glands of the stomach and the digestive apparatur are always affected by extreme cold or heat. Cramps are often produced by the same cause."

"These, doctor, are the immediate results of an over-draught of an ice-cold liquid. Now what are the results of long continued use of such beverages?"

"It interferes materially with digestion and consequently induces a form of dyspepsia. To take a full goblet of very cold water just before a meal has a very bad effect on the assimilation and digestion of that meal. The flow of

of the stomach is stopped and the person continues to feel thirsty as a general thing, and consequently drinks more water. This deranges the whole process of digestion. The little chemical fluid produced is so diluted that it becomes inert. The food is at last forced out of the stomach half-digested and in good condition to cause trouble in the lower parts of the alimentary canal."

"What difficulties are produced by this half-digested food?"

"It irritates the delicate membranes of the organs and sometimes produces inflammation, and often develops into chronic troubles. Any derangement in the upper part of the digestive organs is sure to cause trouble below."

"Does the excessive use of ice water have anything to do with causing sunstroke?"

"It does by inducing a condition of the system which renders it more liable to sun stroke, but not in any other way."

"Do you find many cases of dyspepsia that you can trace to the use of ice-cold drinks?"

"Yes, plenty of them, and to hot drinks also. Both have the same bad effect. Both suspend for a time the functions of the organs.

A down-town physician who hangs out a sign indicating his skill in dealing with the tape-worm was visited by the reporter, and when the frigid proposition was placed plainly before him, with an additional modification as to the effect of ice water on the health of the many jointed taenia solium, he broke out into a fit of eloquence, and said:

"Well, now, my friend, you have struck it at last. The tape-worm will flourish on anything that is not more stimulating than hydrochloric acid, creosote or nicotine. Ice water never causes him any uneasiness, but the pernicious effects of chilling beverages is felt in every household in St. Louis. The cynical growl of the old gentleman who can scarcely rally his scattered thoughts long enough to look pleasant for a moment and give as well as the disagreeable, snappish disposition which has, for many years now, been the principal attribute of his once charming wife, have their origin in ice water, that is, in a large per cent of the cases. People go to court, talking about uncongeniality, neglect, the stupid, careless wife, the cruel, negligent husband, and a thousand other things, when, if they would open their eyes a bit, and remove the ice-pitcher and drink pure Mississippi, their troubles would soon come to an end. A large amount of the dyspepsia coming under our observation is traceable to this source. That is a complaint that drags along and hangs to a person for an age, making life miserable, not only to the patient, but for all those near to him and especially to those under his control. The complete failure of the ice crop for a few years would cure two-thirds of the cases of that disease in the city."

Dr. Merrell, of the American medical college, in discussing the subject said: "Ice water, when taken in large draughts as it usually is in warm weather, cools the stomach and its contents to a point too low to allow digestion to proceed with sufficient rapidity. In such cases a part of the food passes out of the stomach undigested and acts as an irritative throughout the alimentary canal. Irregularity in the system and disease is often the result. We have numerous cases of what is now termed ice-water dyspepsia. In such cases we forbid the use of cold drinks and a cure is soon effected. The constant use of ice water, when used without regard to health, upon the whole system. The undigested food, irritating the mucous membrane of the organs, causes an excessive flow of mucous fluids. The duct which carries the bile from the liver to the duodenum, that is the organ just below the stomach, is sometimes stopped by this excessive flow, and the result is the bile is forced back upon the liver and absorbed, to some extent, into the system. This must be remedied at once or it may prove disastrous. It generally shows itself in the skin and in the eyes. It is a mooted question whether cases of sunstroke are, to any extent, caused by overheated blood. That question is disputed by physicians. The nerve centers may lose control of the temperature of the blood in some cases. Doctors seldom take time in case of sunstroke to try the temperature of the body. They are too busy trying to restore him. The dilution theory is now objected to. Many people drink an enormous amount of water without its having any perceptible effect upon digestion."

HAS A VERY BAD EFFECT

Dr. Shore said: "You can't make a rule on the question of ice water. What will agree with one person will kill another. In the city, as a general thing, it is very hurtful to health and happiness, but in the country, where people's blood is not generally heated to such a high temperature, it is generally harmless, and, in fact, healthy. Warm milk will do more to satisfy thirst, and at the same time is far more healthy."

Dr. Montgomery thought that more dyspepsia was produced by hot coffee and tea than by ice cold-liquids. Strong stimulants, he said, was the great promoter of indigestion. Cramps and colic sometimes result from a heavy draught of ice water and they often prove fatal in a short time.

DR. MOORE SAID

that the heart, brain, stomach, liver, spleen, and, in fact, every organ of the body may be affected by a draught of ice water so as to bring their functions to a stop in a few minutes. Death is the result in many cases. He mentioned a case that occurred only a few days ago in the Lindell hotel. Relief was effected in a short time and the patient recovered.

Dr. Chase, an Olive street dentist, was questioned as to the effect of ice water on the teeth.

"It cracks the enamel," he said, "and leaves the teeth liable to decay. The cracks can be seen, by means of a glass, in the enamel on the front teeth in the mouth of almost anybody. It has a still worse effect on teeth that are filled. The metallic filling expands and contracts more rapidly than does the tooth, and it will finally tear itself away and become loose if subjected to the influence of the great cold produced by icecold liquids. Otherwise its effects are not hurtful to any extent so far as we can observe.

A well-known Washington avenue dentist, when questioned on the subject, said: "Ice water paralyzes the nerve of the tooth if the dentine happens to be exposed to any extent by the removal of the enamel. The nerve in some such cases is killed, and decay and ulceration often takes place in the pulp. Toothache is the result. The periostium covering the roots of the tooth is sometimes affected by the same cause and inflammation is produced. Ulceration follows, and the only remedy is the removal of the tooth."

CRIME'S DECREASE.

The Jailer's Records Show an Improvement on Previous Years.

A Law that Fills the Jail and Increases the Expenses Unnecessarily—How the Prisoners Spend the Sultry Summer Days.

To-day Deputy Jailer Charles E. Wells completed an examination of the records of the jail and a comparison of the annual commitments. Summing up the result this morning, he said: "An examination of the commitment index shows that crime in this city is on a temporary decrease at least. Taking the account of prisoners for any date since the city has had sole control of the institution, I find that the number of persons confined increased monthly up to the present year, and now, for the first time in six years, the totals show a decrease. On this date, 1878, there were ninety-six prisoners in jail. On June 20, 1879, there were 128; 1880, 131; 1881, 179; 1882, 200, and to-day, 142. Since Judge Van Wagoner has taken the bench he has disposed of a large number of cases and done much to clear the jail."

"What will the summer average be?"

"The number of prisoners increases during the summer always. The average throughout the year is about four commitments per day, one of which is for felony and three for misdemeanors. The commitments during the summer are about five per day. During the warm weather the character of crimes is much more serious than during the winter. More murders occur during July and August than in any other two months. By September we are usually well-crowded to our capacity, as there has been a steady admission and no discharge. The highest number of prisoners we have ever had was during the strikes of 1877, when arrests were being made every hour in the day." Speaking of the contract which the general public expect the judge of the criminal court to fill, viz.: to clear the jail, Judge Van Wagoner said: "Our criminal law is badly in need of repairing, and especially on this very subject. You see, the statute makes the highest punishment for any age under eighteen years one year in jail. Grand juries have considered this very subject; it has been discussed time and again, but nothing has been done to amend the matter. The legislature meets session after session, with between thirty and forty lawyers in it, and does nothing to change the law. When these young fellows who commit a large percentage of the crime in this city are arraigned before me and found guilty I have no other course to pursue but to send them to jail. As long as this exemption age is kept at eighteen years it will be impossible to clear the jail. I saw in the report of one of the grand juries, before I came here, that old and experienced criminals secured the services of boys under eighteen years to do the most desperate and risky part of the criminal work, knowing that if they were caught the punishment would be so light, while if caught themselves a jury would probably send them to the penitentiary for fifteen or twenty years. Before much can be done towards clearing the jail it will be necessary to reduce this age of minority in crime to sixteen or seventeen years, and then it will not be necessary to send so many of these young boys just reaching eighteen years back to jail."

Mr. Siegmund expects to accommodate nearly two hundred during the summer months. There are few changes in the routine management of this institution during the summer months. By actual experiment it has been shown that the jail is the coolest place in the vicinity of the Four courts.

In enumerating the inducements offered to spend the summer in jail Deputy Wells said: "We have not many advantages to offer. We shut off the steam and put a few buckets of ice water about the floor. During the extremely warm days the murderers are let out to sit on the gallery in front of the cells. These tiers are back on the western side of the jail, and in the afternoon the sun pours in through the windows and western wickets. These are about the only privileges and advantages that go with this season, and should be very poor inducements for anybody to try and break into jail during the summer season."

SPORTING NEWS.

The Athletics at Last Passed in the Race—Turf Notes—Gossip.

The St. Louis team yesterday took the lead for the American association pennant, defeating the Metropolitans of New York for the sixth consecutive time. The visitors had hard luck in the games played here on Sunday and Monday, and should have won both, but yesterday they had no show, and were beaten from the start. McGinniss pitched a splendid game for St. Louis, and the Mets could do very little with him. Strief was suffering with a sprained ankle, and could not play. Nicol was put on the second bag, and played like a veteran. Mullane went to right field and Harry McCaffrey played at centre. Deasley attempted to catch, but in the second inning his injured hand gave out under the terrible pitching of McGinnis, and Dolan was substituted.

The Browns made two runs in the first inning, one in the fourth and two in the fifth, a total of five. The New Yorkers got one run in the first and one in the third, which was all they could do. No runs were scored after the fifth inning. Runs earned: St. Louis, 3. Base hits: St. Louis, 16; Metropolitans, 5. Errors: St. Louis, 2; Metropolitans, 2. McGinniss, Latham and Nicol led the St. Louis battery with three hits each, McGinniss having two two-baggers among his three.

The Cincinnatis, at home, whitewashed the Athletics again yesterday, and made seven runs themselves. White pitched for the champions, and the Athletics could do but little with him. In the ninth innings the Philadelphians went to pieces, made four errors, and allowed the Cincinnattis to pile up four runs. Base hits: Cincinnati, 12; Athletics, 1. Errors, Cincinnati, 2; Athletics, 6. Earned runs: Cincinnati, 2.

At Louisville, the Eclipse won from the Baltimore nine, by a score of 15 to 2. Baltimore batted well, but could not bunch the hitting, and the fielding was loose. Base hits: Louisville, 13: Baltimore, 11. Errors: Louisville, 2; Baltimore, 6. Runs earned: Louisville, 3; Baltimore, 1.

At Columbus, Ohio, the home team won from the Allegheny club by a score of 5 to 2. Base hits: Columbus, 13; Allegheny, 6. Errors: Columbus, 8; Allegheny, 4. Earned runs: Columbus, 5; Allegheny, 1.

The following were the League's scores yesterday At Providence—Providence, 6; New York, 5. At Boston—Bostons, 9; Philadelphia, 8.

The one and one-eighth miles, for a purse of $600, was easily taken by Breeze; Long Knight second. Time, 2:00¼. Flower of Meath won the three-fourths of a mile, for gentlemen riders, in 1:22¼. The great event, the Coney Island derby, one and a half miles, was a gift for Barnes, who was never headed; Trombone second, Jacobus third. Time, 2:40¾. Volusia took the handicap in 2:53; distance, one and five-eighths miles. The three-fourths of a mile, for two-year-olds, was taken by Tolu in 1:19. Joe Lewis won the steeplechase.

Granite won the ladies' stakes, three-fourths of mile dash, by a neck from Miss Yates in 1:21. In the mile heats, all ages, Barney Aaron got the first heat; Edwin A. the second and third. Best time, 1:48¼.

At Quincy, Ill., yesterday, Conservy won the half-mile trot for two-year-olds. The three-minute race was taken by Big Medicine, after six heats were trotted. Best time, 2:48¼. The half-mile running race was won by Mackey B. in 52 seconds.

THE BASE BALL CRAZE.

The base ball craze has struck commercial circles, and a couple well-known commission houses have it bad. D. R. Francis & Bro. and E. M. Samuel & Sons have offices on the same floor in the same building. After the cares of business are over it is said the venerable heads of the two houses meet and enthusiastically discuss base ball matters. The other evening a chance expression dropped by Web M. Samuel as to the extraordinary abilities of his clerical force in the base-ball line nettled Dave Francis, and he at once began extolling his own force's excellence. Finally the argument became so heated that a challenge followed, that was quickly accepted. Arrangements have all been made for the game, which comes off next Saturday at the Stocks' park. The whole commercial community is stirred to its depths by this forthcoming contest. Invitations have been extended to a large number of outsiders, and it is expected the attendance will be large, especially as it is known that refreshments will be served on the grounds. Great curiosity has been excited to see Web M. Samuel act as umpire and to watch Dave Francis, as scorer, keep track of the errors. The nines of the two houses are composed as follows:

The Allegheny managers held a stormy meeting last night, and bounced Al Pratt, the manager. O. H. Butler, who is at present umpiring games in St. Louis, was tendered the position, and it is probable he will leave to-night to accept it.

The Browns and Metropolitans meet this afternoon again. Mullane will pitch, Tom Sullivan will probably catch, McCaffrey will go to right and Dolan to center. This will be observed as ladies' day, and ladies with or without escorts will be admitted free at the gates.

A LABORIOUS SESSION.

The Council Devotes Five Hours to the Appropriation Bill.

The council last evening held a long session devoted chiefly to the appropriation bill. The mayor notified the council that vacancies at the Mullanphy board would have to be filled, Messrs. Chas. F. Miller, Richard M. Scruggs, Wm. Nichols, August Frank and Henry C. Meyer retiring at the expiration of their terms. Mr. Stone introduced a resolution directing the board of public improvements to submit a plat and ordinances looking to either elevated, cable or horse-car railroad connection with Forest park, locating three routes and drafting the franchises without discrimination. The appropriation bill was taken up in committee of the whole, Mr. Temple in the chair. Mr. Stone's amendment for appropriation of $5,000 in lieu of $3,000 for dog-killing was rejected. Mr. Cummings recommended an appropriation of $38,000 in accordance with the report of the ways and means committee on the Female hospital. The house of delegates had reduced it $8,000. The recommendation was adopted. Mr. Scudder moved to strike out the $6,900 item for renumbering houses, but the amendment was defeated by a tie vote. Mr. Stone moved to change the gaslight appropriation from $284.000 to $291,000, but he withdrew it upon ascertaining that additional lamps were included in the estimate. The appropriation for gasoline lamps was reduced from $3,000 to $1,400. Mr. Cummings wanted the item of $4,000 for insurance of city buildings stricken out, but he was overruled. There was some discussion as to how the mayor's contingent fund, $7,800, was expended. The comptroller could give no information. Mr. Cummings moved that it be reduced to $2,800, but the motion was lost. The appropriation for Benton park was reduced from $2,250 to $2,000; Gamble place, $700 to $500; Hyde park, $2,250 to $2,000; Lafayette park, $6,500 to $5,000. The Forest park appropriation was increased from $8,000 to $10,000. Mr. Stone moved to appropriate $13,390 for extension of the patrol system and erection of sub-police stations. The amendment was lost, the appropriation standing at $3,390. Mr. Vastine complained that the small-pox hospital had been grossly mismanaged. The expenditure last year was $29,000. An investigation was in order. The appropriation of $15,000 stood. The council adjourned at one o'clock this morning.

WASHINGTON'S CARRIAGE.

Old Ben. Richardson Drives it up Broadway to His House in Harlem.

From the New York World.

The object which probably attracted more attention than all others in Harlem yesterday was George Washington's carriage, which stood in the yard attached to "Lincoln Cottage," the residence of Captain Ben. Richardson, on East One hundred and twenty-fifth street.

The carriage is now in a rather dilapidated condition. It is much larger than the carriages of the present day. The front wheels are very small, while the hind wheels are unusually large. The body of the coach is of a light cream color, while the upper part is black. Green blinds are behind the windows and old-fashioned lamps are on each side of the driver's seat.

On each side of the carriage was a placard bearing the following inscription: "George Washington's carriage. The property of Captain Ben Richardson, Lincoln Cottage, Harlem, New York."

A number of men, women and children were found gazing at the curiosity and comparing it with the vehicles of the present day.

Lincoln Cottage itself was something out of the usual run of residences. It is a three-story frame building, in which there is nothing unusual, but upon the roof are two little additions, from each of which a wooded cornice protrudes. Over one is painted "Fort Sumter" and "Fort Donaldson" is over the other. To one of the trees in the yard is nailed a sign, upon which is painted "Lincoln Cottage."

Capt. Richardson was in bed, but on a sort of desk which was placed over the bed he was writing.

The room itself resembled a museum. Odd-looking war implements, oil portraits, ornithological subjects and other relics crowded each other on the walls. Under a case was a slouch hat which Gen. Garfield wore. In another case was the cane which President Lincoln carried, while in still another case were a pair of gloves and a handkerchief which had been owned by President Lincoln.

"Yes, the carriage is attracting considerable attention, isn't it?" said the captain; "and it did on Saturday when I drove it from the pier up to my house."

"What is the history of the carriage, captain, as far as you know?" was asked.

"Well, I believe it was built for Gen. Washington by a builder in Philadelphia named Clarke, and Washington always rode it out, in the height of style, with six cream-colored horses and postillions and outriders.

"When in the spring of 1791 he visited the southern states he made the whole journey, 1,900 miles, in that coach.

"For forty years it stood in the stone building where the station of the Pennsylvania railroad company in Philadelphia now is, and was exhibited at the sanitary fair held in Philadelphia in 1864 during the rebellion.

"It was for some years in the carriage store-house of Dunlap, at Fifth and Buttonwood streets, and was then exhibited at the centennial exhibition.

"It was owned at the time by Charles Wharton, of 2135 Spruce street, Philadelphia, of whom I bought it on December 8, 1876, for $650. I then loaned it to the proprietor of Wood's museum, at the corner of Ninth and Arch streets, where it has remained until a few days ago, when I went to Philadelphia and brought it to this city."

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredients.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:—

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. PAGE & Bro."

Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

MARSTON REMEDY CO., 46 W. 14th St., New York.

The Jew.

From the Central Presbyterian.

Instead of dying out, the Jewish body shows increasing vitality. They cannot be stamped out or swallowed up. They pass from country to country to become practically masters wherever they go. They get the land in Germany and Hungary, and grow rich in Russia; they are the great bankers in London and Paris and the centres of European commerce. In ten (recent) years the Rothschilds furnished £100,000,000 in loans to England, Austria, Prussia, France, Russia and Brazil. They increase faster than Christians, and of every 100,000 persons only eighty-nine Jews die to 143 Christians.

WALTERBORO, S. C.—Dr. J. M. Klein says: "Brown's Iron Bitters have given universal satisfaction."

OUT OF PROPER NOUNS.

Ah! maiden fair, with golden hair,
I cannot tell the love I bear thee.
Thy chiseled arms, thy countless charms,
Prompt me with Venus to compare thee;
But that's a sentiment I chose
When flirting with your cousin Rose.

Your eyes so bright, your teeth so white,
Your cheeks like core of ruddy melon,
Your queenly style, your matchless smile,
Suggest to me the Trojan Helen;
But then your sister Kate would say
I said the same of her to-day.

Your winning face, your dainty grace,
Your glance coquettish, arch, and tricky,
Your voice so sweet, your fairy feet,
Ah! what are these but limbs of Psyche?
But, bless you! that same proper noun
I've tossed at every girl in town.

TILDEN'S AGILITY.

How the Great Athlete Treated a Foolhardy Reporter at Greystone.

From the New York World.

I have just returned from a visit to Greystone, and I have had an experience which reminds me very much of the day that I fell into the front end of a threshing machine and came out with the straw and was tramped on by the horses. Reading in the newspapers that Mr. Tilden was in robust health, with rosy cheeks and sinewy mind, I concluded to go up and interview him.

When I arrived at the front gate of the baronial demesne I saw Mr. Tilden down by the house sawing wood. As he stopped to rub his saw with a bacon rind he caught sight of me. Suspecting me to be a reporter he shouted to a hired man, at work near by, not to let me pass. I never heard such a voice in my life. It sounded like a Nova Scotia fog-horn. A mate on the Mississippi river in olden times would have paid a rental of $25 a month for the use of that voice. I bribed the hired man with a cigar to let me go by. When Mr. Tilden saw me advancing he dropped his saw and started to run. The first thing he did was to clear a garden hedge about five feet high. I lost fully half a minute in hunting a breach in the hedge through which I could pass. By this time Mr. Tilden had bounded away towards the barnyard. Clearing an empty straw-rick which lay in his course, he alighted in close proximity to the orchard fence. I am an agile man myself, and as I ran around the end of the rick he took the fence, and before I could get over he had climbed a tall cherry tree with squirrel-like celerity. I thought I had him, but just as I neared the tree he saw his strategic mistake, and with one bound he leaped out of the tree and started for the house. I got close enough to him at one time to shout: "What do you think of the Ohio republican platform on the tariff question?" but he eluded me and entered the front door of the house.

I chased him from room to room and from story to story, when finally he emerged upon the roof. Before he could close the door I was beside him. This, then, was the end of the steeplechase.

"I see," said I, "that you are familiar with Thomas a Kempis. Will you permit me to inquire whether"—

Before I could finish the sentence Mr. Tilden turned upon me like a wild boar at bay. He caught me by the shoulders, brought me down upon my stomach, and after wiping up the roof with me raised me in his arms and actually hurled me over the battlements. Fortunately I alighted in the midst of a flower-plat upon my cheek. I sustained no serious injury beyond the slight fracture of the humerus, a dislocation of the patella and a slight indentation of the parietal bone. But the next time there is to be any interviewing done at Greystone while Mr. Tilden remains in his present state of robustiousness you can send Mr. John L. Sullivan of Boston. S. GARFIELD, IOWA.—Dr. A. T. Henak says: "Once using Brown's Iron Bitters proves its superiority over all other tonic preparations."

A Boston Merchant of the Old School.

From the Boston Budget.

One of the smartest merchants that ever flourished in this city was Richard Baker, of W. F. Weld & Co. He was a Charleston boy of ordinary advantages, but made his way up by his extraordinary energy and business tact. When his long legs were seen in motion he usually had a clear track, for Dick would run over anything in his way. An old stevedore who was employed by him on central wharf says that he could stow a cargo better than any man he ever knew. One day he was informed that a quantity of freight would have to lay over because it could not be stowed. In a few moments Dick was striding down to his ship. After a rapid survey he ordered a portion of the cargo hoisted out. He then threw off his coat and proceeded to regulate things. In the course of an hour or two the whole cargo was stowed, with considerable surplus room left.

Liquor Drinking in Maine.

From the Brunswick (Me.) Telegraph, June 15.

Anybody who knows anything about the drinking habits of the people of Maine today, knows that liquor is drank in parlors, in offices of law and medicine, and to a limited extent in the studies of the clergy, in kitchens and workshops, in the cars, on steamboats, and, if one wishes to observe, he will find that travelers by every means of conveyance in the state, take the poison with them. The express companies bring it into the state upon every arrival for private consumption and considerable which escapes detection and goes into sale in some smaller country towns. In many of the cities and some of the larger towns the sale is free in bars and saloons, not in open defiance of law, for that statute which public opinion does not support is no law at all, and cannot and never will be enforced. The sooner this fact is recognized the better it will be for the cause of temperance, which is advocated upon sensible grounds only by the better representatives of the reform clubs. It is no pleasure to us to report such a state of things, but so far as our observation extends we know our statements to be true. We detest deception, let it come in where it may, and Neal Dow is so committed to prohibition that he wouldn't tell the truth if he could, and he couldn't if he would, upon the subject of enforcement in this state. We don't assert that some strictly temperance communities cannot be found in Maine, but we do assert that rum is in far too general use all over the state, and we know that some of the best temperance men here regretfully admit this statement. Lying won't rub out the facts.

Active Snakes.

From the Jacksonville Union.

Florida contains fewer dangerous reptiles than people at a distance suppose. We have two kinds especially that are harmless to mankind. These are the "king snake" and "black runner," neither of which ever permits a rattlesnake to get off alive when they meet. The king is very quick, and in the encounter watches his chance—seizes the rattler in the throat, or back of the head, then coils himself around and squeezes him to death. This snake puts up a fair fight, but the rattler is at a disadvantage owing to its clumsiness. On the other hand, the black runner is up to all sorts of tricks. As is well known, the rattler's own bite proves fatal, and when lying at full length can only strike back of him, and in doing this invariably brings its tail in contact with its fangs, resulting always in death. The black snake, whenever it finds a rattler in this position, throws itself across the middle of its body, the result being as above stated. It also kills its victim like the king snake, only after wrapping itself around; its body, being nothing but muscles, stretches out, thereby breaking every joint in its antagonist. The black snake is of more value than the king, as it preys upon all other snakes of a dangerous nature.

A KENTUCKY ROMANCE.

Two Brothers, Two Sisters and an Unexpected Denouncment.

From the Falmouth (Ky.) Independent.

In a certain part of our county there lived a family, in which there are two brothers just entering upon the prime of youthful manhood; a short distance from them—in fact in the same neighborhood—there lives another family in which there are two sisters also in the prime of maidenhood; beautiful, facinating and attractive. These young people being near neighbors and coming in contact with each other often, almost naturally it would seem, fell in love with each other, the eldest brother with one of the sisters and the younger with the other. All went smoothly for a time, and these young people enjoyed themselves and dreamed bright dreams of the future, and no doubt in imagination construed fairy palaces of love, and gardens, like Paradise, which should be only filled with beautiful flowers and fruits of happiness and unalloyed enjoyment. Then, as a matter of course, the question of marriage arose, which must be referred to the parents of the young ladies for approval. The elder had no difficulty in obtaining their consent to his marrying the young lady, and the wedding day was fixed upon. Then the younger brother went to the parents and made known his attachment for the other sister and their mutual desire to "splice and travel the road of life together." But the old folks were decidedly opposed to having more than one of their girls marry into "that family," and plainly informed him that if he wanted a wife he must go elsewhere to get her, intimating that he should desist paying further attention to the young lady in question. But the young man was determined that if his brother married one of the girls he would marry the other. So he went to the young "lady of his love," and told her the circumstances of the situation, and desired her, if she loved him, to prove her love by running off with him. To this she agreed, and the night was fixed upon when they should carry out their mutual agreement. But now comes the strangest part of the story. The two young ladies resembled each other very much in looks, voice, etc., and by some strange freak, when the night of elopement came and the young man went to the appointed place of meeting, he found a woman there whom he thought was the right one, but she was not. Unconscious of this, however, he took her to the place where the marriage ceremony was to be performed before he found out that he was with the wrong girl. Most wonderful to relate, he thought that after he had gone to all this trouble he would get married anyway, so he asked her if she would have him, and she, in order to carry out the joke, said she would, and they were married then and there. It appears that she had overheard him making arrangements to elope with her sister, and, knowing the place of meeting, determined to go there ahead of her, and thus fool the young man, for whom she entertained a secret liking, although she was engaged to be married to his brother. Our informant also states that after they had lived together for some time the elder brother, determining to make the most of the situation, took unto himself the other sister.

Fielding's Attempted Elopement.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

An oft-doubted incident in the life of Henry Fielding is finally set at rest by a communication in the Athenæum from Mr. Austin Dobson. When Mr. Frederick Lawrence published, some thirty years ago, a memoir of the novelist he asserted, without giving his authorities, that Fielding had attempted in his youth to elope with a cousin, and that the image in his memory of this early love had prompted the principal touches in the portrait of Sophia Western. From an extract in the register-book of Lyme Regis Mr. Dobson now establishes the fact that Fielding and a "servant or companion" were dwelling in that town in pursuit of the lady for some time, and that in November, 1725, when the elopement was attempted, they were bound over to keep the peace against her guardian. After the interposition of the authorities Fielding was sent to Leyden, the young lady was dispatched to a remote town in Devonshire. One of them found another wife, the other a different husband.

GAMBLING IN KENTUCKY.

How the Daring Blue Grass Gamesters Pile Up Their Money.

Louisville (Ky.) Letter to Philadelphia Press.

Probably there is no state in the Union where gambling of all kinds is carried on as openly and as generally as it is in Kentucky, and in no city has the mania for gaming such a hold on the public mind as it has in Louisville. Everybody gambles here. The central part of the city is one vast faro bank. For three squares on Fifth street and for four squares on Jefferson street nearly every house is filled with keno rooms and faro banks. The law is a dead letter, for the gamblers are greater than the law. They make the law. This city has now become the horse center of the state, and here are collected the big "sports" of Kentucky. From February until October and November pools are sold in half a dozen places for sums ranging from twenty-five cents to $4,000 and $5,000.

The vast amount of money that changes hands in a single year also is appalling. I was talking the other day with "Fat Dick" Watts, one of the proprietors of the turf exchange, and the figures he gave of the firm's dealings, including orders by telegraph, French mutuals and pool selling, were for last year between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. Compare this with the dealings of any of the national banks or any of the great mercantile houses of the country and see how few surpass it. The amount of betting going on at the races each day is simply amazing. On Derby day no less than $200,000 changed hands on the ground alone, and all this in cash. It wasn't a very good day for betting either.

The winnings that some of these gamblers make is enough to take one's breath away. In one race a one Mr. Jack Chinn, the owner of Leonatus, won $35,000. He is the famous friend of Phil. Thompson, and was his staunchest supporter in all the troubles that arose from Thompson's unfortunate shooting affair. He is a desperate better, and one night last summer, the story runs, in a big poker game with some blue grass race men he won $15,000. Ex-Governor McCreary was at this time talking of running for congress against Thompson. Chinn heard of it and, slapping his hand down on the table in front of him, swore roundly that Thompson should have every cent of his winnings to beat McCreary. When McCreary heard of the threat he failed to make the race. Chinn is a typical Kentucky gambler—handsome, broad-shouldered, liberal to a fault, and knows how to use a pistol. He once faced a mob of thirty republicans at Harrodsburg, who were threatening to kill any enemy of Col. "Bill" Bradley, the leader of their party in the state, and especially hated by Chinn. He boldly denounced Bradley before the whole crowd. In a minute a dozen pistols were out. Chinn instantly drew his own, leveled it at the head of the leader and swore that the first man who attempted to shoot him would read their leader's death warrant. Some friends backed him up, all of them with their weapons drawn, and a bloody battle was only prevented by mutual friends settling the dispute. He carries himself jauntily, never picks a quarrel and never shuns one that is forced on him. A brave, reckless, dashing fellow is Jack Chinn, and a good specimen of the Blue Grass gambler. He owns Leonatus and several other good horses, has a fine farm in the heart of the Blue Grass, and is willing to bet $10,000 on three aces.

Another man here named Keegin won $40,000 on Lida Stanhope and it scarcely raised a ripple. In the same race a pool was sold for $4,000. This is considered moderate betting. The very children on the streets buy pool tickets. On one side of Third street you can see men in kid gloves wagering their thousands at the "Turf," and across the way bootblacks and newsboys bet twenty-five cents on the "Derby."

The judge of our circuit court buys pools and no one thinks wrong of it. He is a big-hearted, honest gentleman, and if public sentiment opposed his gambling he would scorn to do it. The chief of the fire department sells pool tickets across the counter, and the leading councilman of the city is an auctioneer during the races. The governor of the state buys freely, and backs his choice like an old gambler. The very girls buy pool tickets, and divide their pocket money with their brothers and try to plump a winner. Men make princely fortunes in a few years. Milt. Young, an obscure grocery-keeper at Henderson, Ky., got hold of a good horse, and after two years bought himself a magnificent stock farm near Lexington—the famous McGrathiana—and is worth anywhere from $200,000 to $300,000, and has a stable full of flyers. His horses always lost at the right time and won at the right time. "You oughtn't to blame the horses," said a turfman to me; "they didn't have anything to do with it."

The license that is given other kinds of gambling makes Louisville the paradise for the "calculators of chances" as Bret Harte calls them. All the fines that are imposed are freely remitted by the governor. Faro banks are almost as responsible as national banks, and have quite as much capital backing them. Winnings and losings are made at a single sitting that would make one's head swim. Waddell, a well-known gambler in the South, won $10,000 in two hours. Major Hughes lost $3,000 on the turn of a card. A half-drunken party went into a Fifth street bank a few nights ago and closed the bank up for the night, winning everything in the safe.

A Paymaster's Trick.

From the London Society.

A rather good yarn was spun me the other evening over a pipe and glass o' grog by a jolly old half-pay admiral. 'Twas of a messmate of his, a purser on board H. M. S. Napkin or Serviette (I forget which—no matter) then stationed in some far-distant sea. It seems that this paymaster (whom we will call Nibs for the nonce) had got very much in arrear with his store lists, which should have been remitted periodically and punctually to the admiralty. After many a gentle but vain reminder, the lords commissioners at length demanded an immediate return of the ship's accounts.

Act I.—Nibs, finding it now quite beyond his power to supply their lordships with a true and satisfactory statement, having for some time totally neglected the, to him, highly uninteresting subject of figures, hits upon the following ingenious plan: The ship literally swarms with cockroaches, who have the greedy habit of devouring everything they seek. Accordingly Nibs fills a dispatch-box with a quantity of old "slop lists" and other obsolete papers, and to these he introduces (like silk worms upon mulberry leaves) some scores of the hungry vermin. Carefully addressing the parcel to the secretary of the admiralty, he dispatches it by a very slow vessel on its very long voyage to England.

Act II. Whitehall.—The dispatch-box duly arrives, and, on being opened, the secretary discovers naught but a few tiny remnants of ship's accounts—no piece bigger than a square inch—and—oh, horror!—the skins and skeletons of a hundred and more cockroaches! Tableau!

Act II.—The lord commissioners of the admiralty hold a post-mortem examination and inquest upon the bodies, and bring in a verdict of "died through the too rapid consumption of purser's accounts, ultimating in starvation, and that there is no evidence to show either what the papers contained (of a poisonous or other nature) or how the cockroaches found their way into the dispatch-box." The ship was, I believe, immediately ordered home and paid off by Mr. Nibs.

A PLUNGE TO DEATH.

Three Mounted Cowboys Ride at a Gallop Over a Precipice.

From the Denver News.

There arrived on the Burlington train last night a well-known citizen of Greeley, who will probably die from the effects of injuries sustained in one of the most harrowing accidents that has a place in the history of round-up sensations in the west. The victim is Mr. Charles Hughitt. The Little Frenchman range, in Southwestern Nebraska, is perhaps one of the most celebrated cattle sections of the country. In that neighborhood Hughitt was one of the most noted among the cowboys. A college graduate, he combined intelligence with that rare courage which the better class of cowboys always display on the range. He was more than valiant.

On the day in question the herds of the several stockmen were well gathered on the brink of a large mesa which overlooked the Little Frenchman river. The bluff was at least one hundred feet above the stream. While the cattle were being cut out a steer broke away and made a dash along the edge of the yawning chasm. Beneath was the swiftly passing water and sharp jutting rocks. There were 150 cow-boys in the circle, the number being equally divided among three outfits. A representative of each put spurs to his horse and made the chase. Hughitt was the foremost. Following him closely were Wm. Thompson and John Green. All three circled lassoes above their heads and dug the spur points into their horses' sides until the blood spurted. It was a rivalry of horsemanship and herding valor. Along the edge of the awful precipice the maddened steer plunged, the three ambitious horsemen closely pursuing and awaiting an advantage. When about 200 yards away from the herd, and as the surrounding cow-boys were about to utter another yell of encouragement, a cry of destruction and death went heavenward. The steer and horsemen disappeared simultaneously.

The party rushed to the point to look out on the chasm only to see beneath the mingled bodies of dead and dying. While the members stood paralyzed on the brink, yet irresolute as to what they should do, Hughitt was observed springing to his feet. His horse responded to the release, and the rider, after some difficulty, mounted. The twain, by a circuitous route, then slowly climbed back to the mesa. Dismayed by the terrible catastrophe, the cowboys were still standing benumbed with dread when the maimed man appeared among them. Meanwhile a descent was made into the canon by a rescuing party. The steer, the cause of the disaster, escaped injury. Green was found almost buried and dead. He was bruised considerably, and all his limbs were found broken. Thompson was found dead and fearfully mutilated. The pommel of his saddle had completely disemboweled him.

It was twenty-eight miles to Culbertson station and a weary night's ride. The party escorting Hughitt never heard a word of suffering from his lips. Finally he began to bleed at the lungs and a halt was made to determine the extent and nature of his injuries. He was dismounted and examined. Imagine the surprise of the escort when they found that he was maimed almost to death. His collar-bone was broken, his right arm was fractured in two places and from his right side there protruded two broken ribs. Add to all this the fact that he was also internally injured, as evidenced by the bloody vomit, and the condition of the sufferer can be realized. Completely worn out by the long journey, the party arrived at Culbertson about noon yesterday. When the station hove in sight the sufferer revived and began to express hopes of recovery. He was placed on the afternoon train arriving at the hour stated.

"That is the grittiest man I ever met," said the cowboy, in rounding off his account of the occurrence.

A White Apache.

From the Tombstone Republican.

A few days since a Hermosillo dispatch announced the wounding and capture of L. N. Streeter, while heading an Apache foray. Streeter is about fifty years of age, and was born in California, his father being captain of an English merchantman trading on the Pacific coast, and his mother a native Californian. He first came into notice in Arizona by his connection as clerk with the San Carlos agency during Gov. Stafford's administration in the territory. While there he had some difficulty with the officials, it is said, by his giving aid and comfort to hostile Apaches. He left there suddenly and went straight for the camp of Juh and Geronimo, which was then near Janos Pass, on the line between Sonora and Chihuahua. It is stated while he was at the agency he became enamored of a squaw belonging to the tribe, and it was this fact that induced his leaving civilization to cast his fortunes with the Apaches. Gov. Stafford offered a large reward for his apprehension, some stories placing the amount as high as $5,000. He was not apprehended, however, and has never returned to Arizona. He is said by those knowing him intimately to be very intelligent and well educated, and a manuscript now in the hands of the writer, written while Streeter was at Grenados, goes to prove it. He speaks the Apache dialect fluently, and is said to have great influence with them, His standing among the savages, by whom he is known as Don Cassamiro, may be seen when it is known that the eldest son of Chief Geronimo is named for him.

Pizarro's Jaw.

From the Boston Globe.

In a semi-thriving agricultural village of Maine, on a shelf of a closet opening out of the parlor of Captain Henry Mann, is an article that no other person in the world possesses, for the captain obtained it directly from the original owner, who used it over 200 years ago.

This article or trophy is the under jaw bone of Francisco Pizarro, the famous conqueror of Peru. The way it came into Mann's possession is easily told. Sometime during the early part of the last decade he was mate of a guano-laden ship, lying in the port of Callao, awaiting sailing orders, and, having a little surplus time and money, he took a railroad journey up to Lima, the Peruvian capital.

Among other places of interest he visited the big cathedral, in a vault underneath which the remains of the Incas-destroyer are deposited. A priest, who acted as guide, a few Peruvian sight-seers and he descended into the tomb together, and while the talkative priest and his countrymen were inspecting the monuments of lately deceased worthiest the Puritanic Yankee mate, inspired with South American rum and a natural desire to carry something away with him that should serve as a reminder of the occasion, held a muscular interview with the bones of the defunct warrior, which resulted in Pizarro reluctantly consenting to surrender his upper jaw to the enterprising New Englander. Concealing it in his coat pocket for the time being the mate carried it carefully on shipboard and brought it to his Maine home, where it is now kept as a sacred relic.

So the mad freak of a tipsy down easter has placed more wealth and dominion between the fleshless jaws of the dead Pizarro than that bloody Spaniard dared to hope for in the wildest of his many wild dreams.

The economical will be glad to learn that silks will be cheaper than ever in the fall, as thousands of pieces of last year's silks have lately been purchased at Lyons at cost prices.

Harper's Bazar says that independent young women select some simple style that is becoming to them, and have all their dresses, of both rich and plain fabrics, made by one pattern.

A pretty foreign fashion for small girls is to dress them in pelisses of red Surah or Turkey twill, entirely covering their white dresses. With these they wear large wide-brimmed hats and little red socks, not stockings.

The latest novelty for morning hats in the city, for driving, and for the seaside are high-crowned English walking hats or rough white straw with sloping crowns, brims pointed front and back, and rolled close against the crown on each side.

The preferred trimming of white, rough straw, English walking hats is two entire birds—pigeons, ring doves or paroquets. These birds are placed on the left side of the hat, fastening down a scarf or crepe de chine or velvet, which surrounds the crown.

Large white Leghorn hats are trimmed around the crown with white ostrich plumes or a bouquet of red and white roses tied in with sprays of white lilac. Within the brims are placed, near the edge, a gold wire; within this wire gold lace in the torchon designs is put on, and further back, next to the face, pleatings of white lace or a puff of white mull or white net.

The Late Abd-el-Kader.

From the London Daily News.

The following is an exact translation of the terms in which Abd-el-Kader made his engagement with France in 1848: "Grace to God only. I give you my sacred word, that does not admit of any doubt. I declare I will not again excite my people against the French, either by person or by letters or by any other method. I take my oath before Mohammed, Abraham, Moses and Jesus Christ, by the Tourat, the New Testament and the Koran, by the book of Bokhari and the Moslem. I take this oath solemnly, from my heart and tongue. This oath is binding both on me and my friends, who sign not this present paper with me because they do not know how to write. Compliments of Abd-el-Kader, son of Mahi Ed Did." When at St. Cloud he saw in the waiting-room a clock which, besides indicating the time at Paris, showed that of the principal cities of the world, including that of Mecca. This being remarked to the Emir he took out his watch and regulated it so that he could say his prayers at the same time as those who had the happiness to live near the Kaaba. Abd-el-Kader also asked to be shown the direction of Mecca and then knelt down and prayed, probably the only time that the palace of St. Cloud has seen a Mussulman on his knees within its walls.

THE lightning express train on the Ohio and Mississippi railway, leaving St. Louis daily at 8 m., arrives in Cincinnati hours in advance of other route, and every car in the train runs through without change; by any other route every passenger is obliged to change cars and go into trains which run from other cities, and there is a liability of missing connections. The fast line leaving St. Louis at 7 p. m. arrives at Cincinnati hours in advance of every other route, and every passenger has a secured seat through. The Ohio and Mississippi railway is the only line running a solid train from St. Louis to Cincinnati by which all classes of passengers can avoid a midnight change of cars. A would-be competing line which advertises itself as the only one running a Pullman sleeper, does so with the intention of deceiving the public, as the statement has no foundation, in fact. All other routes from St. Louis to Cincinnati are made up of several different roads under different superintendents, and trains are not run as independent Cincinnati trains, as is done on the Ohio and Mississippi. The Ohio and Mississippi railway is the only first-class route to Cincinnati, and the only road under one management between St. Louis and Cincinnati.

Only a Misunderstanding.

An item was published in one of the morning papers yesterday to the effect that Mr. Zach. J. Mitchell, the well-known lawyer of Kirkwood, had been arrested at the instance of a lady client on a charge of embezzling funds belonging to her. Mr. Mitchell shows a letter from the lady to the effect that the action was commenced, not because she thought he had embezzled the money, but because she understood that there was a balance due her in Mr. Mitchell's hands, and also understood from a friend whom she had asked to obtain it, that Mr. Mitchell had refused to pay it over. She explains that the action was taken ill advisedly, and offers to settle the matter amicably. Mr. Mitchell states that the whole affair results from a misunderstanding as to the amount of fee he was to receive, and from the interference of a third party.

Advantage of Heavy Plates.

The soft bituminous coal used in the west is so destructive on all cast iron that the heavy plates in the CHARTER OAK COOK STOVE will be appreciated by housekeepers as well as dealers. This advantage, with excellent draft, quick and uniform baking, makes the CHARTER OAK the most desirable stove in the market.

An Agreed Case.

On the 1st of June, Messrs. Overall & Judson filed a petition in the circuit court in behalf of O. M. Jaffe against Chester H. Krum, assignee of the estate of William Robertson, the Fourth street dry goods merchant. The case was not placed on the regular return docket, but as an agreed statement was to be filed the entry was made on what is called the neat docket, which is not exposed for public inspection. The papers were filed in Judge Horner's division of the court, No. 4, and no disposition has been made of the case. The court adjourned a few days since for the summer. The petitioner states that he was a creditor of William Robertson, and that his claim was duly allowed by Assignee Krum in the sum of $15,503 96. The assignee afterwards declared a dividend of fifty per cent, and the petitioner demanded his dividend, but he alleges that the assignee refused to pay him, and he therefore asked judgment for $7,754 98. The agreed statement of facts recited that in July, 1880, the petitioner made an agreement of limited partnership with Robertson and that, in addition to his advances as such, he loaned to Robertson $11,203 96 in cash, $5,000 in Wabash railroad bonds of the value of $4,300. The assignee declined to pay the dividend in respect of this claim, holding that the petitioner was not entitled to any dividend until all other creditors were paid in full. The condition of the assigned estate of Robertson was such that if the claim of petitioner shared pro rata with the other allowed claims, the several creditors would receive 65 per cent of their respective claims, but that if the petitioner should be postponed to the other creditors the assets of the estate would be exhausted in paying the creditors seventy-five per cent of their respective claims. The matter was submitted to the judgment of the court.

The Allen Partition Sale.

The auction sale of lots belonging to the Allen estate, which was commenced yesterday morning, wrs discontinued at 4 p. m., but of the 160 lots advertised 100 were sold. After disposing of so much of the property the parties interested in the estate thought it best to bring the sale to a close, as everybody who desired a piece of property to build upon had by this time secured it, and it is quite probable that the remaining lots, or at least a majority of them, would have fallen into the hands of speculators. In disposing of the property the following plan was pursued: The auctioneer would commence on some block where there appeared to be a demand for lots. Here he continued to sell so long as the sales were at satisfactory rates. As soon as prices went down to figures considered too much below the real value, a change was made to some other block where the demand appeared to be better. Here, again, the sales continued until prices went down, when another change was made.

All parties interested, including Mr. Papin, under whose management the sale took place, are well satisfied with the result. The heirs have concluded to make a partition of the remainder of the property between them.

Gen. Marion's Tomb.
Pineville, S. C., Cor. Berkeley Gazette.

The recent cyclone ravaged in its course through St. Stephen's parish, the burial ground of the De Veaux family, at Belle Isle plantation, formerly the property of Gen. Marion, about four miles from this village. Here lie buried Gen. Francis Marion and wife, nee Mary Videau, a wealthy Huguenot heiress, whom he married in 1784. Some years ago a tree fell across the slab which covers the grave of Marion, cracking the marble and the brickwork beneath. This cyclone finished it. A huge hickory tree fell across the tomb, and it is now a mass of ruins, the epitaph cannot be deciphered, and as it is of great beauty, and has been republished only in the rare James' "Life of Marion," we give it in full. It was composed. we have heard, by Keating Lewis Simons, and is equal to Prof. Dimitry's celebrated epitaph on Albert Sidney Johnston:

"Sacred to the memory of Brigadier-General Francis Marion, who departed this life on the 27th of February, 1795, in the sixty-third year of his age, deeply regretted by all his fellow-citizens. History will record his worth and rising generations will embalm his memory as one of the most distinguished patriots and heroes of the American revolution, which elevated his native country to honor and independence, and secured to her the blessings of liberty and peace. This tribute of veneration and gratitude is erected in commemoration of the noble and disinterested virtues of the citizen and the gallant exploits of the soldier, who lived without fear and died without reproach."

LOTTA'S LOVERS.

Various Swains Taken Up By Her Only To be Discarded.

From the Philadelphia Spl. to Chicago Times.

There is a story now in circulation, which comes from New York, purporting to give the reason why Lotta Crabtree has been so sad for the past ten years. It represents her as still pining for her first love, a young gentleman of this city, to whom she was engaged in 1873. Temptation was too strong for the young man, and one night, while she was playing in Niblo's Garden, in New York, he took $6,000 of her money and gambled it away. That broke off the match. The disconsolate lover went to drinking, died, and was buried in this city. This young man was Barton Hulmes, of this city, and she has once or twice visited his grave. Two years ago she was reported to be engaged to Haller Gross, of this city, but that engagement was broken, also by her, if there was any serious engagement at all. She was once much infatuated with Harry Bradley, who was her leading man for several years, but when he closed his last season in her company she seemed to forget him entirely, and his intimate friends say he mourns over her coquetry to this day. Then Clement Bainbridge, another one of the actors, was bewitched by her, and matters began to look as though she might become Mrs. Bainbridge before that season was over. He is a popular gentleman, of exceptionally handsome face and figure, but even his manly qualifications were not sufficient to win the consent of Mrs. Crabtree, who is reported to have made a remarkable quiet trip from Troy to Albany just in time to interrupt what she heard was to be a quiet little ceremony during her absence. Her latest suitor was the very awkward young man who met her in London and came to the United States as a member of her company on trial. He brought the pretty name of Cecil Raine along wih him. She became violently fond of him, it is whispered, cut a few weeks back they had a quarrel, and he was removed from the cast in New York for a week. They were to have gone to Europe together, but Lotta left on the City of Berlin two weeks ago. Cecil waited until last Wednesday, when he went to Southampton on the Elbe. Lotta has gone to Dieppe. Those who know the little actress best say that there was one man to whom she was truly and tenderly attached. He met her in the earlier days of her stage life, when she was struggling harp against discouragement to reach the position she has since attained. "But," said the old actor who recited the most of these facts to the reporter to-day, "poor Bob Craig had a wife. Had he been a single man I believe he would have been her husband. His picture hangs there over the mantel under that of Edwin Adams, with the bit of crape around it. He was the man for Lotta, and I'll bet she thinks so to this day."

A singular contest between bluebirds and martens occurred in Lexington, Ky,, While two bluebirds were building a nest in a box a pair of martens laid claim to the nest. Considerable skirmishing was carried on for several days, the bluebirds every time coming off victorious. The neighborhood was startled early one morning by the noise made by a congregation of hundreds of martens and bluebirds, and soon a general battle along the whole line began. For an hour it was carried on with great fierceness and vindictiveness. The birds paid no attention to the surroundings, but fell fighting at the feet of persons standing in the yard. The weather being pleasant, the windows in the houses were raised that the family might witness the conflict. Numbers of birds passed through the windows, and several pairs were caught in the rooms fastened together. There were no cowards or shirks, but every bird seemed intent on doing his whole duty. In one hour the martens were beaten and retired from the contest, leaving the bluebirds in possession of the field.

An old hunter loaned his dog to a friend, an amateur, and this is what the amateur said after returning without the dog: "I never was so disconcerted as when I caught the reproachful glance of the old dog's eye after missing as fair a shot as I ever had; and as I soon repeated the performance, I could painfully see in his expressive countenance disgust as well as reproach. Although I have stood behind the trap and, amid the jeers and hoots of the crowd, missed my ten birds straight, I never was so utterly demoralized in my life, and of course I missed the next one, when the old dog with a look that will haunt me to my dying day, hung his head, and curling his tail between his legs, dejectedly marched back to the wagon, and actually showed his teeth when I tried to coax him out again.

HORSESHOEING.

JOHN M. GOMES, 1410 Clark Avenue.

This cut represents a foot shod with a Tip, or a shoe around the toe only. This plan is not followed only in a case where the heels are contracted, for it will allow the frog to bear on the ground. In some countries, for racing, they shoe them on this system, but a great deal depends how the horse travels. It is an excellent plan to keep the feet moist and pliable, but I would not recommend t for a limestone formation of countr y like ours.

INFORMATION wanted of the whereabo uts o Charles W. Noell.—Charles W. Noell, son of John W. and Mary A. Noell, was born at Louisiana, Pike county, Mo., April 30, 1837. He was reared up from early infancy in Perry county, Mo. In the latter part of the summer of 1865 he left his home in Perry county to enlist in the United States army, since which time his family have never seen him, but in former years frequently heard from him by letter. In February, 1877, he was stationed at Omaha Barracks, Nebraska, under the command of General Crook. At the time of his departure, in 1865, he was of robust figure, weighed about 160 pounds, was about 5 feet 9 inches high, was slightly round-shouldered, had jet black curly hair, light blue eyes, his complexion, which had been medium fair, was somewhat darkened, and his face and body slightly pitted by small-pox, with which he had suffered during the earlier part of the same summer. I have in my hands belonging to said Noell, if alive, and if not, to his legal heirs, the sum of seven hundred and forty-two dollars and fifty cents ($742 50), being amount due him at a final settlement of his mother, Mary Ann Noell's, estate, filed April 17, 1883, in the Probate Court, City of St. Louis, and if this money is not claimed by June, 1883, it will be paid into the Treasury of the State of Missouri. He has also one undivided third interest in certain real estate. For further information apply to
